AN ANCIENT ERA COMES TO LIFE ON LAKE FRONT

Modern Scene Borne Back to Antiquity.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

This is a story of the cave men and women of today and those of long, long ago.

In exploring Chicago's summer time possibilities we come upon these two pictures, one along the south shore lake front and the other conjured out of the Field museum's records of the past.

Brackets show area of "Cave Dwellers" on south shore.

We approach the lakefront across squares of Burnham park grass and across rivers of trafic that by a long stretch of the imagination may be made into the undertone of a glacial stream.

Then we come upon our wild shore, extending from 3100 Leif Eriksen drive about twenty blocks south, a tumbled, ragged scene of giant rocks and sand, sun and wind.

Sun Breaks Through.

A dark young man of Mediterranean type, naked except for trunks and a rakish pirate cloth about his head, stands motionless, alert, on a rock, gazing at the eastern horizon across mysterious waters. The sun breaks through a curtain of murky slate in horizontal red rifts.

On a neighboring rock a blonde woman, dressed in some sort of a shift that leaves her arms and back and legs bare and free, winds up a big windlass net that dips into the water for the morning's catch of fish.

A man pours her a glass of red wine as she works and behind them, under a tarpaulin shelter, is a table and a meal of meat and bread waiting.

A Murmur of Voices.

From a cave a thin wisp of smoke ascends through the rocks and there is a murmur of voices and a sound of meat sizzling upon the fire. Two boys climb out of the cave and dive into the blue waters.

We come to other windlass fishermen's homes by the sounding sea, and mark the inhabitants:

"The Fairfield Rock Lizards."

"The Last Outpost of Civilization."

"Death Valley."

"The Golden Gate."

"Mike Malarmi's Terrors."

"The Wolcott Avenue Rats."

Lawns Encroach Steadily.

The black earth and the ordered lawns encroach steadily, but in the meantime here is this bit of wild vacation land within a short walk. Or is it merely vacation land? Is it not something rising out of the past?

Lift the curtain upon another scene. It is 400 million years ago. This site was a coral reef in a tropical sea.

There were no fish or fishermen, but the sea swarmed with crablike trilobites, foreshadowing the age of vertebrates and mammals, including man.

It was these shell creatures which, in a long and peaceful geological history, sank and formed the limestone bed of the old lake which in time became the rock foundation of the city.

A Stone Age Family.

The last ice sheet came and retreated. The mastodon and the mammoth appeared. We are approaching modern times, for man had come and had begun his cave family life about 50,000 years ago.

We quote from a description of a life size restoration of such a family in the hall of the stone age in Field museum:

"The group shows a Neanderthal family on a sandy platform outside the entrance to a rock shelter. Silhouetted against the deep blue of the Mediterranean stands a young man with a wooden club in his hands. Squatting beside the embers of the fire, the father of the family is watching mussels open as the heat penetrates the shells. His small 5 year old son, anxious to help, is bringing a small twig to replenish the fire. In a cleft in the rock the mother can be seen carrying her youngest baby on her hip."

Or is this a description of today's scene southward from 3100 Leif Eriksen drive?

BUILDERS PUSH QUIZ INTO JOB TIEUP CHARGES

Basis of Collusion Claim Sought.

The Chicago construction industry is going to oper its own inquiry into charges made against it before the monopoly investigating committee in Washington, D. C.

Oscar Rosenthal.

This was announced last night by Oscar W. Rosenthal, chairman of the state housing board and president of the Builders' Association of Chicago, which includes most of the city's large general contracting companies.

It has been charged that the dearth of private building in Chicago is caused by restrictions imposed by union labor in collusion with organized dealers in materials. Among Chicagoans who have so testified before the legislators are Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Carleton A. Smith of Smith & Dawson, contractors at 1 North La Salle street.

Industry Seeks Facts.

"I do not know what facts have been presented in support of the charges, but I do know that as a result of them the building industry stands indicted in the public mind," said Rosenthal.

"The industry is on trial. All its facilities must be directed to finding the facts. If the charges made have been supported by facts, then the industry has something to go on. I think it has the courage to clean its own house.

"We will start an independent investigation immediately, and will welcome any information that is supported by facts."

Meeting Planned Soon.

Rosenthal said he already had begun notifying members that a meeting will be held soon. Admitting that building costs are high, he said that no proof of collusive arrangements have been disclosed in the Washington hearing.

Rosenthal said he does not agree with Contractor Smith that a group of dealers called the Material Merchants' association eliminates competitive prices by fixing quotations for sand, gravel, cement, lime, and mortar.

"I have had no trouble in getting competitive prices from the dealers in this group, which succeeded the Material Dealers' Association of Cook County," said Rosenthal. "The majority of materials companies belong, but the largest and most important dealers do not, so it would seem impossible for them to control prices."

Plumbing Requirements Cited.

Smith also testified in Washington that the public is compelled to pay excessive prices by its inability to hire journeymen workers except through master craftsmen. A householder must hire a master plumber, who in turn places a journeyman plumber on the job, Smith said.

Rosenthal said that this procedure is required by the plumbers' licensing law. This law, which was enacted in 1935, provides that no concern may engage in the plumbing business unless at least one active member is a licensed master plumber. A journeyman plumber, according to the statute, is authorized to perform plumbing work only as the employé of a licensed master plumber or a concern eligible to engage in the plumbing business. The law permits a plumber's apprentice to learn the trade, but stipulates that he may engage in it only as the employé of a master plumber.

Rural Areas Exempted.

Rural areas, however, were exempted from these provisions by an amendment passed in the last session of the legislature. The amendment excludes areas outside cities, villages, or incorporated towns from the requirements of the 1935 statute. Its effect is to permit persons living in these areas to do their own plumbing.

House sponsors of the amendment were Henry Knauf [D., Ladd], and Abner Field [R., Golconda]. Senator Simon E. Lantz [R., Congerville], made an appeal for passage of the amendment on the floor of the senate.

CONTROL OF PRAGUE'S GERMAN UNIVERSITY IS TAKEN OVER BY NAZIS

PRAGUE, July 9.—Prague's German university has been put under the control of a commissioner. Rector Ernst Otto has been retired and in the autumn District Leader Rudolf Jung will replace him.

Addressing German students, Jung declared Reichsfuehrer Hitler wants to educate the rising generation along Nazi lines. "It is the Fuehrer's will," he said, "that this, the oldest university in the first German empire, shall recover its former splendor and be a beacon for German culture in this living space."

The German university in Prague is part of the Emperor Charles' foundation and the oldest university in central Europe. Jung was educated as an engineer and for many years has been an exponent of Nazi ideas.

VERSATILE FIRE FIGHTERS PITCH HAY, MILK COWS

Hackettstown, N. J., July 9.—(AP)—For twelve sweating hours, 100 men worked to the point of exhaustion until dawn today as fire smoldered at the bottom of a haymow in a $20,000 barn.

They pitched out sixty-five tons of hay. They saved the barn and 120 tons of hay stored at the oth r end. Sixty cows, turned loose when the fire broke out, had to be milked, so the fire fighters milked them.

The firemen had to lay hoses 2,500 feet to a brook. Eels clogged up the suction nozzle of the pumper where the stream was dammed, but they weeded them out. Most of the hay burst into flame as it was lifted, and it was rushed into a field to burn itself out.

HE'S HERO, A BUM AND HERO AGAIN, ALL IN ONE DAY

BUENOS AIRES, July 9.—(AP)—Patriotic Luis Garcia became a hero and goat then hero again today during festivities celebrating Argentina's independence.

In a sudden burst of enthusiasm the 25 year old Garcia climbed to the top of the city's 226 foot high obelisk and planted a small Argentine flag.

Astonished spectators cheered but as Garcia came back to earth unimpressed police arrested him for causing disorder and blocking trafic. When President Roberto M. Ortiz heard of the incident he ordered Garcia's release.

The Sergeant Again Writes of Gwendolyn

Strange tales, some of happiness, some of sorrow, are written on the Summerdale police blotter. Usually they are complete in themselves; a few are succeeding chapters of a life. Now there is the story of Gwendolyn Moore.

Her name is on the station blotter of June 3, 1938. On that day the desk sergeant recorded that she had slashed herself 110 times with a razor. When she was asked why, she gave this explanation:

At the age of 17, she was in love with Walter Schulz, a 23 year old coast guardsman. They were to be married in three weeks. But she wanted to be sure he loved her. And so she cut herself, and told her sweetheart an intruder had done it.

Love Stays Police Reprimand.

As she hoped he would Walter vowed vengeance, and bathed her wounds. Police learned the truth and would have rebuked her severely, but Walter told them, "Whatever she did, she did for love of me. And I love her."

Last night the desk sergeant at the Summerdale police station again wrote the name of Gwendolyn Moore on the blotter. This time it read Gwendolyn Moore Schulz. The sergeant wrote that she had flung herself out a fourth story window at the Parmenter hotel, 5012 Winthrop avenue.

Name Strikes Familiar Chord.

Something about the name looked familiar. The desk sergeant turned back the pages of the big blotter until he found the one dated June 3, 1938. The sergeant told his men. They found that Walter had ridden to the Marine hospital with Gwendolyn, holding her hand.

"Did you marry her?" they asked.

"On June 25, 1938," he said.

He nodded when Sergt. Ray Clancy asked if the marriage were a happy one.

"She still wanted to be sure I loved her," Walter said. "She left our home at 1716 Greenleaf avenue a month ago. Ran away, to see if I would find her. I did today—at the hotel. She was wearing a flame colored beach costume.

"You see, she wanted to make me jealous. We quarreled. I said good-by.

"'You go,' she told me, 'and I'll jump out that window.' She pushed the screen out.

"I made her promise not to. Then I left. I wasn't going to give in again.

"But I worried and came back. She wasn't in the room. I looked out the window and saw her."

The desk sergeant closed his blotter. He shook his head at the hospital report that Gwendolyn's chance for life is slim.

"Let's hope," he said, "we don't have to write another chapter in the life of Gwendolyn Moore Schulz tomorrow."

UNCLE SAM GOES ON STILL HUNT FOR COW THAT CALVED JULY 3

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 9.—(AP)—Marion's cow had a calf, but the post office department is having an awful time finding "Mom & Dad" in Denver to let them know about it.

An airmail postcard signed "Marion" and addressed to "Mom & Dad, general delivery, Denver," was returned to I. A. Smoot, Salt Lake City postmaster, by J. O. Stevic, postmaster at Denver.

"We are unable to inform Mom & Dad that the cow has calved," said Stevic in an accompanying note. "Will you please attempt to obtain better address?"

Replying, Smoot wrote: "We now have the matter in the hands of the state veterinarian for him to check on all cows that calved on July 3."

TORTURER PUT TO DEATH IN SPAIN WITH A GARROTE

BARCELONA, Spain, July 9.—(AP)—Alfonso Laurent Cik, Jugo-Slav architect, was put to death by garroting yesterday for painting weird designs on the walls of civil war "torture chambers."

Nationalists charged at his court-martial that he built small, odd shaped concrete cells and decorated them with bright colored lines, spots and cubes that changed shape under dazzling lights and drove republican-held prisoners to madness.

Cik, 38 years old and a former cabaret decorator, said Spanish syndicalists forced him to paint the chambers. Former prisoners testified some of the cells, only four feet high, had an inclined concrete chair and bed so that it was impossible to sit or lie down more than a minute at a time.

Prowler Kills Father Trying to Save Girls

Sparta, Wis., July 9.—[Special.]—Robert Williams was clubbed to death by Henry Stark early today after Williams had trapped Stark in the bedroom of Williams' twin daughters on Williams' farm, eleven miles southeast of here.

Stark, who was Williams' farm hand, then critically wounded one of the twins and their mother with a shotgun. The twins, who are 19 years old, jumped from their second floor window to run across the fields in their nightgowns for help.

The wounded one, Berenice, collapsed. The other, Eunice, fled on, with Stark in pursuit. Unable to overtake her, he halted and ended his life with a shotgun charge through the heart.

Separated from Wife.

Stark, who was 36 years old, was separated from his wife. Sherif Hallet Jenkins said neighbors told him Stark had been jealous of every one who came in contact with the brunette girls. The farm hand also had been sulking, the sheriff said, because Williams and his wife and their son Donald did not include him in a party to Yellowstone National park.

Stark, who had been employed on the farm for thirteen years, had a room on the second floor of the big farm house. On the same floor was the twins' room and that of their parents. The twins, employed in town as stenographers since they finished high school, had remained at the farm with their grandmother while the rest of the family went to Yellowstone.

Returns from Round of Drinking.

Stark was away when the party returned from Yellowstone Saturday night. Donald Williams took his grandmother home and started on to his home at Midlands, Mich.

About 1 a. m. today Stark was driven to the Williams' home by another man whose name authorities have not divulged. The farm hand had been drinking. He told the other man, "There's going to be a change around here tonight." His companion drove on.

Taking off his shoes Stark slipped into the twins' room. He awakened them and told them: "If you scream I'll kill you."

Both girls cried out for their father. Williams, who was 51 years old, came running into the room. Seizing a ballbat that was in the corner, Stark beat him to death.

Fires Twice Through Door.

The girls' mother, Miriam, came into the room in her night gown. Stark ran past her to his room for his 12 gauge shotgun. Mrs. Williams slammed the door.

A moment later leaden slugs tore through the door, striking her under the heart. A second charge tore into Berenice's back. Nevertheless she was able to climb out the window with her sister. Eunice summoned help from the home of Henry Vieth.

Berenice and her mother were brought here to St. Mary's hospital.

Hot Dog Gets Live Dog Out of Hole; That's No Bologna

Eli Nach's dog, a fox terrier, fell into a narrow four foot ventilating shaft last night near his home at 3338 West 5th avenue. For two hours every conceivable idea was employed to rescue the dog, but to no avail. Finally, some one tied a hot dog to a rope and let it down the shaft. The dog grabbed it and then released it. The bait was then pulled nearer the surface and the dog jumped to retrieve it. A neighborhood boy reached down the shaft and caugh' the dog as it leaped for the sausage. The dog was then hauled to safety.

CRA MAPS NEW RULES TO MAKE RELIEFERS WORK

Plan Cuts if 3 Year Bill Is Signed.

Two new regulations designed to make relief cheating and malingering more difficult in Illinois were planned yesterday by Leo M. Lyons, Chicago relief administrator and executive secretary of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission.

One of his proposals would change the system of payment so that able bodied reliefers who decline to work would lose a part of their relief check. The other proposal would carry out the provisions of a new legislative act, not yet signed by Gov. Horner, which would require three years' residence in the state as a preliminary to going on the relief rolls.

Compulsory Labor Legal.

Lyons said there is ample existing law to compel the able bodied to labor for their checks. However, of 197,000 relief cases, he finds only 3,000 are now working. He says that this is largely due to the fact that social workers and labor organizations have protested against what they call "forced labor."

Lyons suggested yesterday that every relief grant be made in two checks, one to be given as ordinary relief and the other as a payment for work.

"Suppose a family head now gets $30 a month," said Lyons. "We would split that in half. One $15 check would be withheld unless the man had done thirty hours of work in the month at 50 cents an hour. If he had failed to work, he would be told when he comes to the relief station that an investigation will be made to learn why."

50,000 Reliefers Employable.

Lyons already has approved a suggestion by Oscar E. Hewitt, Chicago's commissioner of public works, that reliefers be put to work in the parks and recreation centers and on the beaches. Hewitt fixed the 50 cents an hour rate as fair. His staff and the relief administration are working on details of the plan. More than 50,000 reliefers in Chicago are listed as employable.

The principal object of the new residence act now up to Gov. Horner is to halt the steady influx into Illinois of indigents from other states. At present about 2,000 persons arrive each month from southern states alone. They are attracted by the higher relief grants made here, and are put on relief rolls almost immediately.

Plan to Analyze Rolls.

"As soon as the law becomes effective," Lyons said, "we will analyze our lists. Persons who have resided in the state less than three years will be removed."

Another purpose of the bill is to discourage shifting of reliefers from rural to industrial sections, where costs of living are higher. Under the new provisions the cost of maintaining a rural relief client emigrating to Chicago would be charged back to the county in which he resided during the last three years.

Representatives Clinton Searle [R., Rock Island] and Ora Smith [D., Biggsville], who sponsored the measure, said downstate areas had suffered from similar migrations. Western Illinois has been a "dumping ground" for the idle of Missouri and Iowa, it was stated.

Act After Pauper Ruling.

Their advocacy of the bill came after Attorney General John E. Cassidy ruled that under the old law paupers were eligible for relief as soon as they could establish legal residence in Illinois.

What will be done with the out of state indigents to be removed from the relief lists has not been determined. The CRA now has working agreements with communities in some other states regarding the return of paupers.

PLAN NO WORK, NO DOLE

Harrisburg, Pa., July 9.—(AP)—Pennsylvania's experimental relief program of "no work—no dole" was described tonight by a state official as an attempt to "reëstablish the work habit."

Howard L. Russell, secretary of public assistance in the cabinet of Gov. Arthur H. James, declared this habit "inevitably tends to be lost in the cases of persons who have been unemployed and on relief rolls for a considerable time."

Pennsylvania has been spending 100 million dollars a year in public funds for its needy.

The no work no dole law, effective Sept. 1, came out of the Republican majority's legislative mill in the 1939 session as a move to help cut down that figure.

Must Take Any Job.

It requires all able bodied persons on relief rolls—there are 250,000—to accept any job offered by a local community. Refusal to take such a job will mean forfeiture of the weekly cash relief grant.

"The new law may provide an increased work incentive in the small percentage of cases where persons on relief may not have actively sought work in the past," said Russell.

"It also will make a substantial, though at present unpredictable return to the various communities in the form of useful public work which, under the law, must be entirely in addition to present or possible WPA and regular employment."

Democrats Oppose Law.

The law has aroused a storm of controversy. Union leaders attacked it as forced labor and some viewed it as a wedge to force labor standards downward.

Democrats in the legislature called it the work or starve program. "We'll have to beat relief, or relief will beat us," Republican House Speaker Ellwood J. Turner retorted.

He referred to the 200 million dollars expended in Pennsylvania for the unemployed, the aged, the blind and dependent children from 1937 to 1939. The current two year budget was cut to 122 millions.

"Just what the effect of what we're doing will be on the relief rolls, I can't say," Russell said. "Nobody knows how it will work out. It's just a 'tester.'"

Basic responsibility for administration of the law rests with county assistance boards, which will have to find the work projects.

CHICAGO YOUTH AND 3 DROWN ON SUNDAY OUTINGS

Raymond Ryll, 16 years old, of 2852 Shakespeare avenue, was drowned yesterday off Montrose beach. He had been swimming on an inflated rubber tube and apparently slipped off it in deep water. The body was recovered by life guards and futile efforts were made to revive the youth.

Three other drownings were reported in the suburban area yesterday. Two of the victims lost their lives at a beach near Chesterton, Ind., in separate accidents. They were Peter Urba, 55 years old, 1330 South 49th avenue, Cicero, and Andrew Yerga, 28, of Indianapolis boulevard and Michigan avenue, Hammond. Both were on picnics and sank unnoticed by their companions.

Richard Mustafa, 6 years old, of 3720 Catalpa street, Indiana Harbor, was upset by a wave off the Gary municipal beach and drowned in less than three feet of water.

Canton Boy Drowned.

Canton, Ill., July 9.—[Special.]—Clyde Smith, 6 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Smith, drowned this afternoon in Vanwinkle lake, just outside the city limits. He and three sisters had been playing on the shore of the lake. When he was missed a searching party was organized and his body was found half an hour later.

10 PIGEONS RACE 2,500 MILES ON A BET BY OWNERS

Portland, Ore., July 9.—(AP)—Ten pigeons, not yet twenty-four hours out of their Pittsburgh, Pa., cotes, took off from here today on a race home, to settle a wager between their owners.

The birds, owned by Charles W. Beckman and Albert P. Greb of the Mount Oliver Pigeon association, Pittsburgh, were shipped here by airplane. They were released immediately, circled over the ship, and set out for the east.

Ralph Warren, president of the Oregon Pigeon club, said he believed it is the longest race ever attempted by pigeon fanciers—approximately 2,500 miles. He said the birds should reach Pittsburgh in four days.

TENANTS SUFFER AS UNION PICKETS A HELPFUL SON

Deliveries to His Mother's Flat Forbidden.

Tenants in the nineteen flat building at 7600 Aberdeen street voiced resentment yesterday over the union picketing of the premises because a dutiful son is doing the janitor work. Pickets placed there by the Chicago Flat Janitors' union last May 22 have stopped deliveries of milk, food, and merchandise. Union painters and repairmen have been prevented from working in the building.

A motion for a temporary injunction to restrain the union from its picketing will be heard today before Judge Donald S. McKinlay in the Superior court. Suit for a permanent injunction, based on the recent Illinois Supreme court decision banning stranger picketing [picketing by nonemployés] was filed in that court Saturday in behalf of Dan I. Kephart, whose parents own the building.

Savings Pay College Tuition.

According to young Kephart, a law student at the University of Chicago, the union objects to his doing the janitor work and demands that a union janitor be hired. Kephart said the money he saves his parents pays his tuition at the university.

Mrs. Alice Comiskey, one of the tenants, told of the difficulty she had in getting permission from the union to let the milk man leave a bottle of special milk for her baby daughter less than 2 years old.

"The milkman now leaves a bottle of soft curd milk, but he cannot leave regular milk or other dairy products handled by them," she said. "When I want regular milk or cottage cheese I have to go down to the wagon in the alley."

Ban Laundry Pickup in Alley.

Mrs. Katherine Haubenreiser, a widow, told this story:

"One laundryman told me that he could not call for or deliver the laundry because of the picketing," she said. "I notified Mr. Kephart, the owner, who asked the laundry driver if it would be all right if Mr. Kephart brought the laundry to the truck.

"The driver gave his consent and Mr. Kephart put it in the truck. Some minutes later the driver returned with the laundry and said the picket told him that he would have to take it back to the apartment."

Tenants Carry Own Supplies.

Kephart said all the tenants have to carry home their groceries and other merchandise. Even department store drivers will not make deliveries to tenants, he said.

The Kepharts purchased the building eleven years ago and for the last eight years their son has been doing the janitor work. No protest was made until two months ago, young Kephart said. Three stench bombs then were thrown into the hallways and notices were placed in the tenants' mail boxes that there would be a recurrence of the vandalism unless a union janitor were hired.

Ex-Envoy Dodd, Victim of Throat Ailment, Is Better

New York, July 9.—(AP)—Mount Sinai hospital officials reported tonight that William E. Dodd, former American ambassador to Germany, was suffering from bulbar palsy, affecting the muscles of his throat, and that the condition now is under control. The official announcement said Dodd would remain in the hospital for some time.

NAVIGATION DAY SHEDS LIGHT ON ASSETS OF LAKE

A series of spectacular exhibitions were given along Chicago's water front last night in celebration of Navigation day. The observance was started as a method of acquainting Chicagoans with the benefits they derive from the lake, and was witnessed by many thousands on the beaches and in the parks.

An official party of 200 guests of the Navigation day committee boarded the coast guard cutter Escanaba at Navy pier at 8:30 p. m. and from its deck viewed the water intake cribs, the beaches, and the harbors. At North avenue the fireboat Fred A. Busse sprayed huge streams of water into the air.

Each point of interest on the lake front was lighted, as the Escanaba neared it, by rays from the airplane beacon atop the Palmolive building. A. J. Caliendo was in charge of arrangements for the observance.

REIGN OF LABOR LEADER BROKEN BY PRISON TERM

Rosser Gets 12 Years on Arson Charge.

Portland, Ore., July 9.—[Special.]—The latest chapter of Oregon's labor union troubles was written last week when Albert E. Rosser, former secretary of the Oregon teamsters, American Federation of Labor affiliate, entered the state penitentiary to serve a sentence of twelve years for complicity in the burning of the West Salem Box company plant. The plant was destroyed in December, 1937, with a loss of $100,000.

Rosser was sent to the penitentiary within a few hours after the state Supreme court had denied all appeals. Rosser fought for eighteen months to gain his freedom and it was estimated that his trial had cost $10,000. Rosser's attorneys indicated that they might carry the case to the United States Supreme court.

Prosecutor to Quit.

Ralph E. Moody, state coördinator and leader in the state's war on labor terrorism, announced that he would retire Aug. 1. Former Gov. Charles H. Martin hired Moody, a former assistant United States attorney general and former assistant state's attorney general, to help district attorneys prosecute cases growing out of a long series of bombings and incendiarism blamed upon labor racketeers. The record shows that 233 charges of labor terrorism were filed and that 120 persons were arrested.

For months employers had been threatened and property destroyed until the situation, in the words of Gov. Martin, had become intolerable. The boldness of the racketeers' operations was emphasized shortly after Moody's appointment, when a parade of sympathizers started toward the penitentiary and various county jails with the announced intention of freeing those arrested on terrorism charges.

Today the only unfinished business in the racket prosecutions is the retrial of Jack Estabrook, former secretary of the Portland A. F. of L. warehouse men, who was charged with bombing a Washington county beer tavern, and the appeal of Hugh Reynolds, former secretary of the Eugene, Ore., teamsters, who was convicted of perjury.

Juries Twice Disagreed.

Juries disagreed twice before convicting Estabrook and the state Supreme court reversed the case on the third trial, so Estabrook must be tried for the fourth time. Reynolds was convicted of breaking windows of a nonunion barber shop. The state Supreme court also reversed his case. Reynolds then was convicted of perjury in connection with his testimony in the window breaking case.

Rosser rose to his place as dictator of Portland's organized truck drivers and warehousemen and later to those throughout Oregon in 1934 through the aid of Dave Beck, Washington labor leader. He drew the attention of Harry Dall, an international organizer for the teamsters.

After Dall had organized the Portland teamsters he recommended that Rosser he named secretary-treasurer of the union. Beck authorized Rosser's appointment at a salary of $100 a month. Rosser at once began organizing the truck drivers and warehousemen throughout the state.

Rosser used strong methods, according to the men who did his bidding, and soon the membership of the various teamster locals in Portland rose to 8,000. Each month these members paid $2 each in union dues and any special assessments Rosser saw fit to levy.

Took Orders from Beck.

When Rosser had become undisputed head of trucking and allied work in Oregon he still took orders from Beck, and Beck personally told this to Portland teamsters at a union meeting. Beck went so far, truck drivers have related, as to tell the men not to question expenditures made by Rosser.

Rosser's arrest followed the burning of the box factory late in 1937. Testimony in his trial revealed three men had been hired to set the plant afire because of the management's nonunion status.

Rosser was arrested in February, 1938, and convicted of arson. He was sentenced to twelve years in the state penitentiary on Aug. 12, 1938, by Circuit Judge Airle Walker of Polk county.

Labor terrorism and an exposé of Rosser's record at his trial aroused the people of Oregon against labor in general and when the anti-picketing law was put before the voters last year it passed by a big majority. This law was taken into the Circuit courts and Saturday a three judge court upheld the constitutionality of the act. Labor leaders announce that validity of the act will be tested further.

$40 PENSIONS HINGE ON NORTH DAKOTA'S ELECTION TOMORROW

Bismarck, N. D., July 9.—(AP)—Former Gov. William Langer's vote getting powers will be tested fully in a special election next Tuesday when North Dakota votes on four measures he initiated to raise funds to help pay for $40 minimum old age pensions he also sponsored. The measures include a gross income tax, a system of municipal liquor stores, and a moratorium on road building.

Defeated in the June, 1938, primary election, when he ran for United States senator on the Republican ticket against Senator Gerald P. Nye, and again in the general election last fall, when he ran on an independent ticket for the same office, Langer's immediate influence in state affairs will hinge on the outcome of the election.

Langer is opposed by many persons and organizations, including Democratic Gov. John Moses, the North Dakota Taxpayers association, motor, bus, and truck companies, road construction firms, the highway department, and, paradoxically, liquor interests and the W. C. T. U. Even the Nonpartisan league—a faction of the Republican party—which Langer headed for many years, refused to aid him when its advisory council voted to remain neutral on the issue.

Locks Car Doors as Bandits Curb Auto, but They Get All

Carl Carlson of 5732 North Francisco avenue locked the doors of his car yesterday when two bandits forced him to the curb at Bryn Mawr and Francisco avenues. But the bandits smashed a window with a length of pipe and pulled him out. They took his $50 watch and $18 and then took him behind a clump of trees where they removed his trousers to discourage pursuit.

21 WPA WORKERS READY TO FIGHT FOR THEIR JOBS

Warn Striking Agitators to Quit Harassing Them.

Twenty-one WPA workers on a WPA project outside Bloomington served notice yesterday that they are prepared to fight for their jobs today. They said they would resist if agitators persist in seeking to get them to join the widespread strike against the new order, enacted by congress, requiring all workers on Work Projects administration rolls, skilled and unskilled alike, to work 130 hours a month.

The Bloomington workers announced they would back up their right to work with shotguns if harassed by striking WPA workmen. When strikers approached the site Saturday, they were told by the nonstrikers: "We aim to stay on the job. We're on the WPA pay roll and we're going to stay there."

Normal Mayor Offers Protection.

In nearby Normal, Mayor Grant M. Ridenour told WPA workmen on a water main project that he would afford them protection against any attempts by Bloomington strikers to force them to join the strike.

WPA Commissioner Francis C. Harrington has ruled in Washington that any worker absent five consecutive days from a project without just cause will be dismissed. This ruling, it was reported, is sending WPA workers in various parts of the country back to work.

The Workers Security federation, claiming a membership of 32,000 workers, announced in Washington that its members would be back at their jobs this morning. The federation is comprised of groups which seceded recently from the Workers' alliance.

3,000 Vote Strike in Herrin.

In Herrin, Ill., however, more than 3,000 WPA workers from Williamson and Franklin counties voted at a rally yesterday to go on strike today. Similar action was taken by 200 workers who met in Reservoir park in Centralia.

Charles Miner, Illinois WPA administrator, said the 130 hour requirement was nothing new. He asserted that the same condition prevailed for four years prior to September, 1936.

Harrington and various state administrators will discuss the strike at a two day session in the Stevens hotel starting Wednesday.

Strike Estimates Differ.

Harrington has estimated the total number of strikers throughout the country at about 75,000. Labor leaders claim the number of strikers exceeds 150,000.

Most of the agitation in Illinois against the new hours requirement is being carried on by the Illinois Workers' alliance. Frank McCulloch, secretary-treasurer of the group, reported that the strikes are spreading in Jackson, St. Clair, Franklin, Alexander, Madison, and Marion counties.

Edgar G. Brown, president of the United Government Employés, Inc., a Negro organization, called a nationwide conference in Chicago Thursday to discuss the new regulations.

HEARING TO OUST BRIDGES DEPENDS ON TECHNICALITY

Trial Hinges on Where Burden of Proof Lies.

San Francisco, Cal., July 9.—[Special.]—A legal point will be the first matter for decision when the Harry Bridges deportation hearing opens tomorrow on Angel Island in San Francisco bay.

The question is: Does the 39 year old C. I. O. leader have to prove he is not an undesirable alien affiliated with the communist party? Or does the burden of proof rest on the government in the same way that a man before the courts is presumed innocent until proven guilty?

James M. Landis, dean of the Harvard law school, who will preside at the hearing as a special examiner, will have to decide this question before the case can get under way.

Outlines Government's Position.

Thomas Shoemaker, chief deputy immigration commissioner, who will direct the government's case, today contended the hearing is simply an opportunity for Bridges to show cause why he should not be deported to his native Australia and therefore the burden of proof is on him.

"This is not a court of law, and court procedure does not apply," said Shoemaker. "Issuance of the deportation warant against Bridges constitutes the government's prima facie case. Burden of proof is on him."

Miss Carol King, New York lawyer and chief of defense counsel, declared a Supreme court decision had intimated burden of proof is on the government.

Plans Appeal if He Loses.

Asked what she planned in case Dean Landis rules that she must go ahead, she said:

"I'll put Bridges on the stand, let him prove that he paid his head tax when he came here in 1920 and, therefore, is legally in the United States. Then I'll take him off the stand and say to the government: 'Go ahead and order him deported if you want to.' Then I'll go into federal court, get a writ of habeas corpus and take it to the highest court in the land. I'll let the Supreme court decide on whom the burden of proof rests."

German Flyer Dies in Crash as Belgian King Watches

Weigh 75 Pounds

The Hartley triplets, Betty, Beverly, and Billie, observed their first birthday with dignity yesterday at their home, 5702 South Halsted street. They stared silently, a trifle awed, at the birthday cake provided by their parents, Jerry and Irene Hartley. Then Billie, the only one who can talk, made a brief comment on the lone candle burning atop it. The three babies weighed four pounds apiece when they were born and spent their first several weeks in an incubator. Yesterday their combined weight was more than 75 pounds.

REPORT McNUTT SLATED FOR POST IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., July 9.—(AP)—Reports circulated in congressional circles today that Paul V. McNutt, whose resignation as high commissioner of the Philippines is expected shortly, would be appointed to an important post in the administration, probably as head of the new Federal Security agency.

McNutt, former governor of Indiana and potential candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1940, returned from his far away post last week. He already had made it clear that efforts to obtain convention delegates pledged to him were predicated on the assumption that President Roosevelt would not seek renomination.

Soon after arrival the commissioner conferred with Mr. Roosevelt, Postmaster General Farley and others in the administration. The growing talk of a new appointment for McNutt aroused interest, particularly because relations between the commissioner and Mr. Roosevelt were regarded as strained after the Democratic convention at Chicago in 1932, when McNutt delayed in turning over the Indiana delegation's votes to Roosevelt.

Search Dominican Envoy in Spain as He Quits Post

Washington, D. C., July 9.—(AP)—The Dominican legation said today that Barcelona police had detained and searched the Dominican minister to Spain when he was on his way last week to take up his new post as minister to Mexico. A statement said the minister, Rafael Cesar Tolentino, was released when nothing illegal was found. The legation said a strong protest will be made.

DETROIT URGES CHICAGO-EUROPE DIRECT AIR ROUTE

Business Men Point to 450 Mile Saving.

Detroit, Mich., July 9.—[Special.]—Detroit joined Chicago today in urging early establishment of direct air service between the central west and Newfoundland on the great circle air course to Europe.

A route from Chicago to Botwood, Newfoundland, via Detroit, Toronto, Montreal, and Shediac, N. B., would save more than 450 miles and three hours of travel compared with the circuitous European routing by way of New York City.

Plan to Double Service.

Pan-American Airways is operating on regular schedule from New York to England over the northern route via Shediac, Botwood, and Foynes, Ireland, and soon expects to double this service. Britain's Imperial Airways expects to inaugurate its service over this route within a few months. European air trafic from central and western United States is now forced to detour over two sides of a triangle in journeying to New York for trans-Atlantic trips.

Sounding the keynote of opinion among Detroit's business and industrial leaders, Harvey Campbell, executive secretary of the Detroit Board of Commerce, said:

"Any one who takes a look at a globe can see that it isn't much farther from Detroit to London than it is from New York to London, via the so-called great circle course.

Time Saving Feature.

"The great circle course begins at Newfoundland for those flying over the Atlantic from New York. Its obvious extension westward is right down the St. Lawrence river to Detroit and on to Chicago."

"We have always felt that such a service would be instituted to take advantage of the time saving feature. The facts are there for any one to see. Use a piece of string on a globe and prove it to your own satisfaction."

Representative Carl E. Mapes [Republican], senior member of the Michigan congressional delegation, who was a passenger on the first scheduled flight over the North Atlantic two weeks aago said he would support efforts to establish the Chicago-Newfoundland route.

"Such a direct routing of air service between Detroit and European airports would be very desirable from the standpoint of Michigan and the middle west generally," Representative Mapes said.

Points to Advantages.

"I flew to London on the Pan-American Airways preview flight two weeks ago Saturday and returned a week later—and the natural advantages of the direct link between Botwood and the midwest are very apparent.

"'I suppose it is principally a matter of negotiating reciprocal operating rights between United States and Canadian companies that is holding up this logical development. Certainly American operators should share this trafic potentiality with the Canadian nationalized line."

Maj. C. V. Burnett, manager of the Detroit city airport and president of the National Association of Airport Executives, predicted establishment of the direct service would pay its way from the outset.

"We are interested," he said, "in improving Detroit air transport service. The great industries of Detroit, most of which have European representatives, would alone assure a substantial volume of trans-Atlantic American travel.

Mayor Favors New Service.

Mayor Richard W. Reading declared himself in favor of a new service which would save time and encourage travel and trade and said he would direct his advisory committee on aviation to make a thorough study of the situation with a view toward urging federal action. William B. Stout, pioneer air transport operator of a decade ago and a member of the mayor's aviation committee, said the proposed service "is a grand idea and one that can help Detroit get back on the aviation map."

N. Y. WHITE WINGS TAKE OVER KAHN ESTATE AS HOME

Cold Springs Harbor, N. Y., July 9.—[Special.]—More than 15,000 persons rolled eastward from the city today in 3,000 cars, 82 chartered buses, and two special trains to take possession of the late Otto H. Kahn's estate near here in the name of the New York City department of sanitation's welfare honor relief fund.

The throng—street sweepers, their wives and children—clustered in groups on a terraced lawn overlooking the estate's 441 acres to hear Commissioner William F. Arey say:

"I bid you welcome to this, your magnificent new home in the country."

The crowds drifted in streams through the spacious reception rooms, patios, libraries, and bedrooms.

Cash obtained from the sanitation department's annual baseball game proceeds provided $100,000 for purchase of the property from Mrs. Kahn at a "give away" price. Oheka, as Kahn named the estate—now rechristened Sanita—centers around a residence built along French château lines.

JAP SUICIDE CORPS SET TO DRIVE ON 2,000 RED TROOPS

Must Face Heavy Barrage from River Heights.

BY RUSSELL BRINES.

WITH JAPANESE TROOPS ON THE MONGOLIAN FRONTIER, July 9.—(AP)—A Japanese "suicide corps" was prepared today for an attempt to drive 2,000 soviet-Mongolian soldiers across the Khalka river in the sixth day of hostilities on a narrow patch of land in the vast Mongolian plain.

The soviet-Mongolian troops were described as the survivors of the force which continued to hold in the center of the line when Japanese-Manchukuan troops pushed both Mongolian flanks back across the river two days ago.

The "suicide corps" faced the menace of soviet fire from thirty light artillery pieces and ten heavy guns on a higher plain west of the Khalka and overlooking a gentle slope down which the Japanese must pursue the embattled 2,000.

Two Miles from River.

The soviet-Mongolian troops last night were slightly less than two miles from the Khalka within a triangle formed by the Khalka and Kholsten [Holstein] rivers along the border between Outer Mongolia and Manchukuo.

A Kwantung [continental] army spokesman said the Japanese-Manchukuan forces had advanced one and one-fourth miles after occupying two heights, Noro and Nomonhan, in the center of the line in simultaneous night attacks under cover of a thunderstorm on Friday.

But officers acknowledged potential danger remained because there are numerous points, particularly south of Nomonhan height, 150 feet above the prairie, where the soviet-Mongolians may cross the swift Khakla under cover of their artillery.

There is a menace also in the soviet aircraft which demonstrated its activity after the Japanese claimed it had been destroyed.

Raid Behind Japanese Line.

Forty soviet planes yesterday raided two strategic points along a thirty mile communications line in what appeared to be only a gesture because the northermost point reached was eleven miles from Hailar, important railroad center in Manchukuo about 120 miles from the Khalka river fighting.

The hit-and-run raids caused no damage as the planes discharged their bombs on empty fields and fled before they were challenged by Japanese aircraft.

Two of four bridges across the Khalka, north of its confluence with the Kholsten, were bombed and destroyed and one was damaged.

Japanese indicated they would be satisfied with a victory in which their foe was driven across the Khalka, leading to an impression that an armed peace might prevail unless the soviet-Mongolian forces launched a counter offensive.

Soldiers Poorly Trained.

I interviewed two soviet prisoners, who were 20 and 25 years old, respectively, and was told they were sent to the front without knowledge of where they were going and after a minimum of military training.

Suggestions have been made that the hostilities on the border have been the outgrowth of a desire to test recruits in event that there might be a far eastern conflict coinciding with a European conflict.

2 Are Killed, 6 Injured by Dynamite Explosion

Malta, Mont., July 9.—(AP)—Two men were killed and six injured here today by a premature dynamite explosion. The men were dynamiting Milk river for the body of a youth who was accidentally drowned. The dead were Dale Slade, 30 years old, and Roland Aasgard, 45. Slade broke three sticks of dynamite and held three fuses in his hand. He lit one fuse and the dynamite exploded.

VISITOR DIES OF HEART ATTACK.

Edward Duffin, 58 years old, of South Bend, Ind., died of heart disease last night at 212 East 154th street, Harvey, where he was visiting.

JAP ARMY SNUBS BRITISH GENERAL VISITING TIENTSIN

TIENTSIN, China, July 9.—(AP)—Strained relations between British and Japanese military forces here received a further setback today when the Japanese commander in Tientsin refused to receive the visiting commander of British troops at Hongkong.

The snub came as the British officer, Maj. Gen. Arthur E. Grasett, sought to call on Japanese Gen. Masaharu Honma to maintain first hand relations carried on prior to the Japanese blockade of the British and French concessions.

Japanese sentries continued to handle severely all Britons seeking to pass Japanese barriers around the British concession.

Many Britons reported that upon reaching the Japanese stripping sheds they were sent back repeatedly to the foot of the waiting lines to make them lose face before Chinese spectators.

HOLLAND WOMAN, 83, DIES.

Holland, Mich., July 9.—[Special.]—Mrs. Charles W. Bowles, 83 years old, died today in Crispe hospital. She was the widow of one of the earliest telephone utility men in Allegan county and western Michigan.

POLES GARBED AS FARMERS REPEL REFUGEE JEWS

BERLIN, July 9.—(AP)—Man smuggling was reported going on today in both directions on the Polish-German frontier.

Hundreds of Polish Jews under Nazi compulsion were said to be on the border attempting to enter Poland while German residents of Poland were trying to get back home against the official Polish will.

Polish police were reported disguised as farmers working in fields along the border to thwart the smuggling activities.

Contingents of Jews have been taken daily to the frontier by German police since the latest general roundup of Polish Jews which began early last month.

Bomb Injures Rumanian Mayor; Blame Hungarians

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 9.—A bomb, thrown into his home early today, seriously wounded the mayor of Halmei, Rumanian village on the Hungarian frontier. Rumanian authorities claimed the bomb was made in Hungary.

LEADERS ADMIT REPEAL OF ARMS BAN IS DOOMED

Expect Fight to Be Shelved Until Next Session.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 9.—President Roosevelt's undertaking to repeal the embargo on the export of arms to belligerents and otherwise to modify the existing neutrality act appeared tonight to be doomed to defeat.

Administration leaders are unable to promise the President even a fifty-fifty chance of passage of the repealer at this session of congress. Indications are that the whole question will be shelved until the next session. In that event congress probably will adjourn in about a fortnight.

The house already has refused to repeal the arms embargo.

Dozen More in Reserve.

With forty-two senators committed to rejection of the President's proposals, leaders of the opposition said tonight that ten or twelve more senators are prepared to fall in line if their votes become necessary. This means that the opposition commands more than a majority of the senate against the President on this issue.

Some administration leaders made no bones of confessing defeat in the effort to amend the neutrality act.

"The neutrality fight is lost for the time being," said Representative A. J. Sabath [D., Ill.], chairman of the house rules committee, "and there is no use for us to remain in session any longer than necessary to clean up some odd end legislation."

So strong is the opposition to modification of the neutrality laws that the administration has been unable, to date, to force consideration of the arms embargo repealer by the senate foreign relations committee.

Gillette Holds Whip Hand.

Of the twenty-three members of the committee, ten [Democrats as well as Republicans] are in favor of tabling the whole question so far as this session of congress is concerned. Eleven members are supporters of the administration program. The remaining two members—Senators Walter F. George [D., Ga.] and Guy M. Gillette [D., Ia.]—have not stated their position openly. There is good reason to believe, however, that Senator George will be found aligned with the opposition.

In reality, therefore, it is Senator Gillette who is holding the balance of power in the committee. If he votes with the administration when the committee meets on Tuesday the committee will consider the President's proposal to repeal the arms embargo. If he votes against the administration the question will be tabled by the committee.

Vote Cannot Be Bought.

Gillette is one of the Democratic senators whom the President sought to purge from his party last year because of his failure to support various Roosevelt issues, but chiefly the undertaking to pack the Supreme court.

Now the President is beseeching Senator Gillette to vote for repeal of the arms embargo. Secretary of State Cordell Hull and other cabinet members have carried the President's plea to the Iowa senator. Whether Gillette has withstood the presidential appeal does not appear at this writing.

Ordinarily the administration influences votes in congress by dishing out public works projects, appointments to office, and other patronage. Unfortunately for the administration in this instance Gillette is not the sort of senator whose vote can be bought.

People's Fears Grow.

The opposition in congress to repeal of the arms embargo is the reflection of the popular fear, expressed particularly in the central states and the far west, that the President's program is likely to involve the country in war. Western senators and congressmen literally have been inundated with letters and telegrams from constituents imploring that no step be taken that might plunge America into war.

Senator Scott Lucas [D., Ill.] today said he has received more than 25,000 letters. All expressed a desire to keep out of war.

Senator James M. Slattery [D., Ill.] testified to the receipt of an enormous volume of mail overwhelmingly opposed to repeal of the arms embargo.

NAZIS BAN TERM 'SHORTS'; ERASE FOREIGN NAMES

BERLIN, July 9.—(AP)—The textile industry council in an effort to get rid of foreign names today banned such terms as shorts, breeches, knickerbockers and blazers.

Germans may continue to wear them but must call them by pure German names.

The council got stuck on a name for the Germans' beloved knickerbockers—and two of them, in spite of everything, are foreign. They are sporthosen, golfhosen, and pluderhosen [wide trousers]. It was not announced what blazers would be dubbed.

Call 15 Classes in Memel for Duty in Hitler Army

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

WARSAW, Poland, July 9.—German authorities in Memelland issued orders today calling up fifteen classes of men in the territory acquired from Luthuania for military service in the German army. Conscription of these men—in classes of the years 1906 to 1920—will begin this month.

NUNS IN AUSTRIAN HOSPITALS OUT; NAZI NURSES IN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA, July 9.—The first migration of nuns from Austria, following its annexation by Germany and the closing down of convent schools, is being followed by a second wave.

The new migration is a result of the elimination of nuns from hospitals. The Lainz hospital is the first hospital in Vienna to be taken over by Nazi nurses.

The nuns, deprived of their teaching and nursing tasks, are studying foreign languages to qualify for similar work abroad. Some of their vacated buildings are being leased to Nazi authorities. The air force has taken over part of the Salesian nunnery, while part of the Ursuline nunnery in Vienna is in the hands of the army.

Monks in Austria are in a similar plight. The evacuation of the Capuchin monastery at Salzberg is expected soon, but the monks do not know where they can settle. Their garden has been converted into a public park.

Privy Councillor Vincent Blaha, director of the Scottish gymnasium in Vienna, whose pupils have included the late Emperor Karl, last ruler of the Austro-Hungarian empire, and the son of Dr. Arthur von Seyss-Inquart, former chancellor and now a German minister without portfolio, is head cook in the Scottish cloister kitchen. It is said he fills his new post with both skill and humor.

POLAND TO SEEK FULL ALLIANCE, ENGLAND HEARS

Chamberlain Expected to Bare Policy Today.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 9.—Count Edward Raczynski, Polish ambassador to Great Britain, flew back to London tonight from Warsaw with the Polish government's latest views on the European situation, particularly the Danzig problem.

Count Edward Raczynski.

He will see Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax tomorrow and probably Prime Minister Chamberlain before the latter makes his promised statement on British policy toward Poland in the house of commons.

Diplomatic circles in Paris said the French government already had approved the text of Chamberlain's statement.

Full Alliance Sought.

Ambassador Raczynski was reported to have been instructed by his government to seek a full alliance with Great Britain, involving a general tightening up of the military and political relations of the two countries.

Although the Polish envoy refused to disclose the outcome of his four day talks in Warsaw with Col. Josef Beck, Polish foreign minister, and Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, Poland's strong man, informed quarters in London indicated the Polish government does not expect any immediate German coup in Danzig. The suggestion was revived that some arrangement may be fixed to settle the issue without war.

One result of Count Raczynski's trip is likely to be an early resumption of British-Polish negotiations for credits to Poland. The negotiations have been at a standstill for more than a week.

Seek Loan to Pay Troops.

Col. Adam Koc, chief of the Polish financial mission in London who flew back to Warsaw last week because, he said, he was annoyed at British procrastination in extending financial aid to the Poles, also returned to London tonight. He did not travel with the ambassador.

Indications were that the Poles are seeking commercial credits of $75,000,000 for war and raw materials from Britain and a loan of $100,000,000 to help pay to maintain approximately a million men under arms as a safeguard against German attack.

The Wilmette is carrying three divisions from Cincinnati and Columbus, O.

POLAND REPORTS NAZI TROOPS PUT UP BARBED WIRE

WARSAW, Poland, July 9.—(AP)—Reports reached Warsaw tonight of German troop movements along the frontier between Poland and former Czecho-Slovakia. There were no details as to the number of troops involved.

The Germans were said to be constructing barbed wire entanglements about 200 yards from the frontier while materials for fortifications appeared to be arriving steadily opposite the Polish border.

From Danzig it was reported that a Polish railway employé, Paul Zynda, had been attacked and severely beaten yesterday by four Danzig Nazis at Schonwerling, in the Free City area.

NAZIS IN DANZIG BOO POLAND AND TAUNT ENGLAND

Blind Faith in Hitler's Leadership Pledged.

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, July 9.—(AP)—Nazis of Danzig at two rousing mass meetings today thundered defiance at Poland and pledged blind faith in the leadership of Adolf Hitler.

Nazis taunt Britain at rallies in Danzig territory [shown in black].

Tens of thousands of perspiring free city residents of two communities, wearing heavy brown, black, and gray uniforms, cheered Danzig District Leader Albert Foerster's reassertion of confidence that Hitler would "liberate the free city."

The Nazi leader demanded that Poland give up privileges to store arms on the so-called Westerplatte, on the western shore of Danzig harbor. This Polish munitions dump on the fringe of the city of Danzig long has been the subject of quarrels between Poland and Danzig in the league of nations.

American Envoy Arrives.

Meanwhile, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle Jr., American minister to Poland, arrived unannounced in the free city on what was believed to be a visit to inform himself concerning the Danzig situation. During the afternoon he picnicked with C. Porter Kykendall, American consul, and Mrs. Kykendall and City Councilor Boettcher, who is attached to the Danzig senate office for foreign affairs.

Foerster first spoke at Oliva, picturesque town near the Baltic sea. There he warned Poland that Danzig had adequate defenses against any aggressive action the Poles may be contemplating. Poland was booed lustily and Great Britain ridiculed roundly at this rally.

Then Foerster appeared at the harbor city of Neufahrwasser, near the Westerplatte munitions depot, where he counseled citizens of the community to "smash Polish influence wherever possible."

"The construction of the competitive Polish harbor of Gdynia, less than ten kilometers [six and a quarter miles] from the spot on which I stand has been a decisive factor forcing us to recognize the necessity of political union with Germany," Foerster said. "Now it is up to you to prove to the world that this is a German harbor."

Throughout the two addresses the tall party leader stressed his confidence that Hitler would march in shortly to claim Danzig for Germany.

"Through the Fuehrer's political genius ten million Germans have been brought back to the fatherland, he declared at Neufahrwasser. "We are only 450,000 and should we doubt that he will do for us what he has done for far greater numbers? We believe he will free us."

Carry Spades on Shoulders.

Companies of men of the Labor Service carrying shining spades which gleamed like silver in the bright sunshine, stood at attention at Neufahrwasser. Trim girls in uniforms of the Bund Deutscher Maedels circulated about selling badges.

Black-shirted Danzig Hitler guards lined the street and tugs in the harbor tooted salutes.

Foerster, addressing Nazi formations drawn up in the village market place at Oliva, reaffirmed the Nazi determination to bring about the political union of Danzig and Germany.

He spoke under an outstretched banner which bore the legend: "The Fuehrer [Hitler] orders, we follow."

Farmers and small tradesmen—many of them hot and uncomfortable in their party uniforms—gave catcalls when Foerster described what he termed "Polish swindles."

Refers to "Hanswursts."

The crowd laughed loudly when the Nazi leader referred to "hanswursts" in London—a term indicating stupid fellows.

Foerster said the first and outstanding "swindle" in regard to Danzig was the contention it was a free city. "As it is it cannot live or die," he said. "It is neither flesh nor fish. As it is, it is nothing. So we want to return to our home in the reich to correct this impossible condition."

The Nazi leader said the Polish minority in Danzig was insignificant, but he cautioned this minority sternly:

"Our advice to the Poles here is that they remain quiet. They are guests here and have nothing to say. In Danzig we Germans decide our own fate."

He twitted Britain and France for "irresolution and weakness."

SWISS 'FUEHRER' GOES ON TRIAL AS A TRAITOR TODAY

Little Man with Big Ideas Maps Defense Plan.

ZURICH, Switzerland, July 9.—(AP)—Dr. Alfred Zander, Switzerland's imprisoned "little fuehrer," mapped defense plans with his attorneys tonight on the eve of his trial on charges of attempts against he international security of the Swiss federation.

The would-be Hitler, a little man with big ambitions, and as many of his lieutenants as the police have been able to catch, will be called to account tomorrow for activities of their Bund Treuer Eidgenossen Nationalsozialistischer Weltangschaung—Swiss Nazi party modeled after the German Nazis.

Wanted to Be Dictator.

Police said that before they seized Zander, 34 years old, and his assistants last fall the Nazi leader had ambitions to follow the German Fuehrer's example in Germany and make this little Alpine republic a Nazi style dictatorship with himself the dictator.

Among Zander's co-defendants are five chief aids. Three other topflight lieutenants who are under indictment fled Switzerland before police could catch them.

Swiss authorities said Zander had no monopoly on the Nazi idea in Switzerland, but that his organization was the largest and best organized of three Nazi type parties in the country. All of these parties have been disbanded by government order with their known leaders in jail or in exile.

They declared Zander's group was in close touch with Berlin and operated with the aid of funds provided from the German capital.

VISIONS DANZIG CRISIS SETTLED WITHOUT A WAR

PARIS, July 9.—(AP)—Lord Rothermere, publisher of the London Daily Mail and other British newspapers, declared today in a statement to the Havas [French] news agency that he was certain a peaceful solution could be found to the Danzig quarrel.

Rothermere said the increased military strength of Great Britain and France made it possible for them now to "dictate a policy of appeasement." He described the problem as difficult, but said if it were treated in a "realistic manner" there was no reason why it could not be settled.

Political circles considered it significant that the publisher's statement was issued on the eve of Prime Minister Chamberlain's expected statement on British-French willingness to fight to keep Danzig from being taken by Germany over Polish objections.

COLLAPSES AND DIES IN TAVERN.

Darel Taggert, 26 years old, died yesterday, apparently of a heart ailment, in a tavern at 2249 Lincoln avenue. He lived at 1501 Sedgwick street.

BRITAIN, FRANCE AGAIN FAIL TO LINE UP SOVIET

MOSCOW, July 9.—(AP)—The longest conversation in many weeks on the British-French-soviet Russian negotiations for a mutual assistance pact ended at the Kremlin late tonight with the outcome still one of Europe's big question marks.

For three hours representatives of the three powers discussed the proposed agreement.

DREAMS THAT GO TO MARKET

By CALEB

DREAMS classify as static and dynamic. All through our hours of sleep, scientists say, the kaleidoscope of the subconscious emits the static sort. A half-dozen such fleeting visions may usurp attention, to plague or enchant the slumberer, and be remembered afterward . . . while thousands of others flit through the brain's dim background unnoticed.

Not so easily unnoticed, however, are the dreams of the mind awake. These, at least in potential, are dynamic. Trapped by attention; dimensioned; made coherent and orderly—they often grow into commercial realities; energetic patterns of a business's future. Literally, these are the dreams that go to market.

The larger and more complex an organization, the greater the number of such "waking dreams" that require mobilizing and assembly into workable units of management, purchasing, financing, equipment, display, publicity and promotion. As the "blueprints of tomorrow," so to speak, they extend far beyond the interests of today — embracing days, weeks, months, even years, ahead. A tremendous amount of executive thinking, therefore, unknown to the public, concerns itself, as does every dream, with something still hoped-for but nonexistent. Energized by competent instruction and execution, this futurist thinking may become a wonder-working fact. Such is the metamorphosis by which all business thoughts culminate as business things. . . .

Obviously, no business would be possible, profitable, or progressive at all, were it not for this highly imaginative, yet utterly practical, form of business meditation. Many a vigorous major activity of today's market was dreamed of and planned for long years earlier. Anticipation alone enabled the realization; in fact, the more ably a business performs, the more certain you can be that its activities are no "last-minute notions," suddenly thrust into operation, but the climax of long-debated, soundly developed forethoughts.

Into the moulding of every productive, marketworthy plan, go many dreams that were themselves enthusiastic fancies, impracticable exaggerations, or unworkable theories. But just as a larger quantity of marble is required than will appear as final sculpture, so large—even impossible—thoughts provide the substance from which progress is finally and successfully shaped. . . . A challenging and adventurous part of the managerial and operative thinking of today is devoted to dreaming into mental existence the still finer, more beautiful, more effective, public service of 1940 and 1941.

ITALY BUILDS ITS STRENGTH IN AIR AROUND 2 PLANES

Tribune Writer Describes Bomber and Fighter.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, July 9.—The Italian air force today is built around two airplanes—the Savoia-Marchetti S-79, a fast tri-motored bomber, and the Fiat CR-32, a biplane fighter with a liquid cooled motor. Everywhere I went in Italy I saw large numbers of these machines and seldom any others. I was told that 90 per cent of the Italian squadrons are flying one or the other of these types.

Both these airplanes should be familiar in appearance to the American public. Both of them were used extensively in the Ethiopian and Spanish wars and frequently were photographed. The Savoia will be particularly remembered for a striking photograph that came out of Spain 18 months ago. This picture, filled with the menace of aerial death, showed three of these sinister machines speeding high over a dim gray landscape.

A Remarkable Plane.

The Savoia is a remarkable airplane. It was conceived in 1934 and the earliest models began flying in 1935. By all standards it should be an obsolete type, far behind in performance, when compared with the latest bombers developed elsewhere. But it is not behind any other bombers now in service in regular military squadrons of any other nation.

Merely by increasing the power of the S-79's engines the Italians have been able to keep it equal to or ahead of the bombers of other powers.

When the plane was first delivered it was fitted with Alfa-Romeo motors developing about 640 horse power. It now is being equipped with Piaggio engines that develop 1,100 horse power for takeoff. Its speed when first delivered to tactical squadrons was 240 miles an hour—far ahead of any other bomber in the world.

Reason for Speed Told.

Today the Savoia holds records for having carried loads of one and two tons for distances of 625 miles at speeds of 293 miles an hour. Its top speed for short dashes is supposed to be in excess of 300 miles an hour. This is as fast or faster than any other bombers in England, France, America, or Germany.

The secret of the Savoia's performance has always been the high wing loadings—that is, the high ratios between total wing area and total loaded weight of the plane. It is axiomatic in aviation that the higher the wing loading the faster the plane.

The Savoia's weight in the latest models is as great as 34.2 pounds for each square foot of supporting area. The highest comparable loadings in America, for example, are those of the latest racing airplanes. Designers in America have hesitated to exceed 21 and 22 pounds for each square foot of wing. The only military airplane in America with a similar wing loading is the Bell Airacuda, a very late, fast type.

Reduce Landing Speed.

The difficulty always has been that machines with high wing loadings land so fast that they are unsafe. The Italian designers got away from the high landing speeds by fitting their bombers with automatic slots along the leading edges of their wings and using slotted flaps.

The Savoia lands at 69 miles an hour. I have seen formation and single machines come drifting in to land in rough air conditions. Never once have I seen a bad landing made. Obviously the pilots had complete control down to the stalling point and below.

Incidentally the Savoia, with a wing spread of only 62 feet, has a gross weight of 23,100 pounds. Our own Douglas DC-3, with a span of 95 feet, has a gross weight of only 1,000 pounds more.

Range of 450 Miles.

The Fiat CR-32 is a chunky, strongly built little airplane. It weighs 4,300 pounds and has a 550 horse power Fiat V-12 water cooled motor. It is built entirely of metal framework, wings and fuselage, and is fabric covered. Most of the present squadrons have two position controlable pitch propellers.

Its top speed is 235 miles an hour. It lands at 66 miles an hour. The ceiling is 23,500 feet and its flying range is 450 miles.

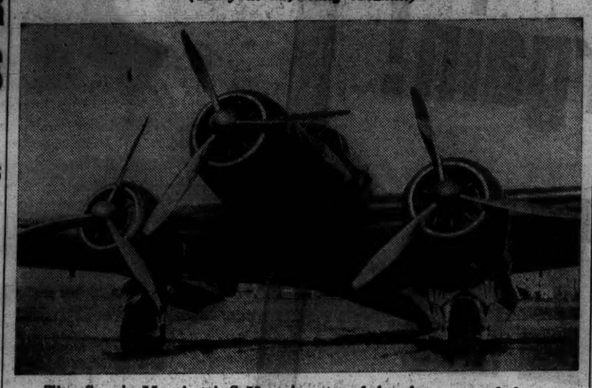
In Spain the Fiat was armed with one .50 caliber machine gun and one .303 caliber gun. According to Italian records, pilots flying the Fiats shot down more than 500 Loyalist airplanes. And although the Fiat was slower than Russian Chato and Rata machines, it proved its general superiority in maneuverability.

I was able to get one glance into the cockpit of a CR-32 and I was amazed by the simplicity of the instruments and control system compared to recent American fighting ships. The little fighter carries no radio, no night flying equipment, no special motor instruments, and only the simplest blind flying instruments.

All the pilot is concerned with are his motor temperature gauges and radiator shutter controls, his throttle, stick and rudder pedals, and the cocking handles of his two machine guns. And the machine I examined had a fixed pitch propeller with automatic mixture control. There are no flaps or slots.

Backbone of Italian Air Fleets

(Story in adjoining column.)



The Savoia-Marchetti S-79, tri-motored bomber, regarded as one of the best in the world, although it was first put in service in 1935.

The Fiat CR-32, biplane fighter with a liquid cooled motor, which excels in maneuverability.

Air Line Offers Its Services to Encourage Private Flyers

W. A. Patterson, president of United Air Lines, announced yesterday that his company will provide weather information, hangar space, and other services to all private flyers who want them. Letters and identification cards are being sent out by United to private pilots.

W. A. Patterson.

"I feel," said Patterson, "that the commercial aviation industry has not fully recognized the helpful rôle the private flyer is playing in the development of aviation. United, wishing to recognize that helpfulness and at the same time bring the private flyer in closer contact with our operations so that he may better understand our methods and policies, invites him to make such use of our facilities as may be available."

Weather Reports Free.

Accurate and frequent weather reports will be made available without cost to the private pilots. Information being received constantly from weather stations all over the country as well as from pilots in the air is the basis of the reports made out at short intervals by the air lines.

Access to such weather reports will enable private pilots to foresee conditions at their destinations almost as well as the men flying airliners. The latter, however, will still have the advantages of being able to receive reports in the air by radio [a convenience few private pilots enjoy], of getting to their destinations faster than most private pilots can, and of long training in weather interpretation.

Trafic Information Offered.

Trafic information and advice is another service offered. Knowledge that four big airliners are streaking eastward toward Chicago at 9,000 feet is information that might be very useful to a private flyer who is contemplating flying westward. The amount of trafic at airports and the bumpiness of the air at various altitudes are other items of news that air lines will give to interested private flyers.

Gasoline and oil will be sold when they are not available elsewhere and hangar space may be rented if none is available otherwise. United Air Lines has agreed to do its best to accommodate any private flyer who needs its help in these respects. Even mechanics may be engaged to give service to private pilots in trouble.

HAS DAY'S MEALS ON 3 CONTINENTS IN WORLD FLIGHT

Broker Hops for N. Y. on Last Lap; 19 Days.

MARSEILLES, France, July 9.—(AP)—The Atlantic Clipper left for New York today by way of Lisbon and the Azores with seven passengers, including Norman C. Lee, New York broker, who was on the last leg of a round-the-world circuit by commercial planes.

Lee declared "bad connections" had raised his prospective traveling time to "about 19 days." He figured the entire trip would cost $2,100. He left New York June 21 on a transcontinental plane to the Pacific coast where he caught the China Clipper to Hongkong.

From there he flew to Bangkok, Siam, aboard a British Imperial Airways liner, thence to Athens on a Netherlands K. L. M. plane and again by Imperial Airways to Marseilles. At the French port he had time enough for a side trip to Paris by air.

"One of the most interesting points of the trip was eating one day's three meals on three different continents," Lee recounted. "I had breakfast at Basrah, on the Persian gulf in Asia; luncheon at Alexandria, in Africa; and dinner in the European city of Athens."

Completes Survey Flight.

New York, July 9.—(AP)—The American Export air lines' twin-motored plane Transatlantic completed its first round trip survey flight to Europe today, setting down at Floyd Bennett field 22 hours and 50 minutes after leaving Horta, The Azores.

The flight, terminating at Marseilles, France, and made preparatory to inaugurating passenger service over the southern route at a date not yet determined, started June 30. Stops in each direction were made at Horta, Lisbon, and Biscarosse, France.

Yankee Clipper in England.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, July 9.—(AP)—The Yankee Clipper arrived here today at 3:55 p. m., [10:55 a. m., Chicago time] with 19 passengers, including 11 newspaper, magazine, radio, and news service executives.

The giant Pan-American Airways flying boat left Port Washington, N. Y., at 8:25 a. m., Chicago time, yesterday, flying to Southampton by way of Canada, Newfoundland, and Ireland.

French Plane Flying to N. Y.

HORTA, The Azores, July 9.—(AP)—The flying boat Lieutenant De Vaisseau Paris, inaugurating Air France's trans-Atlantic service to North America, hopped off for New York today at 5:11 p. m. [12:11 p. m., Chicago time].

STRAPPED BRITON PICKS UP LINGO TO MAKE A BEEF

Edwin Frederick Baldwin Larking is a sergeant of the international police force in Shanghai, China. On furlough and en route to Brighton, England, for a visit, Sergt. Larking halted in Chicago Saturday night.

He appeared in the central police station last night.

"What is it you call a complaint to the police?" he asked.

An obliging policeman said it was a beef.

"I would like to make a beef," said Larking. "I engaged a room in the Roosevelt hotel at 1152 Wabash avenue and went to sleep. While I slept some one came in and stole $88 and two travelers' checks for two pounds each. I have my tickets home, but this straps me for cash."

FLEEING BANDIT SLAIN; HOSTAGE FREED UNHURT

Garden City, Kas., July 9.—(AP)—A suspected bank robber was shot and killed here early today after fleeing from a Sidney, Neb., gun battle in which his companion was killed.

Shortly before noon yesterday two bandits held up the Fort Morgan, Colo., Farmers' State bank, fleeing with $9,550. A few hours later at Sidney, officers killed one of the robbers in the city's business section. His companion, wounded in the shoulder, kidnaped Glenn Oldenburg, a filling station attendant, and forced him to drive here.

Freeing Oldenburg, the bandit sought quarters in a rooming house, where officers trailed him and shot him when he resisted arrest. A driver's license found on the body bore the name Myron Earl Howen, 22 years old, of Denver.

At Denver police said the man shot at Sidney was known as Kenneth Allen. Records showed both Allen and Howen had served sentences in the Kansas reformatory.

Powder Magazine Blows Up in Spain; 30 Die, 80 Hurt

SALAMANCA, Spain, July 9.—(AP)—A powder magazine exploded today in Penadanda de Bracamonte, twenty-five miles southeast of Salamanca, killing at least thirty persons and wounding eighty. Officials and rescue workers at the scene estimated the casualties might total 200.

ROCKY YUCATAN SOIL IS NOT TOO TOUGH FOR SISAL

Writer Tells How 'Green Gold' Is Grown.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MERIDA, Yucatan, Mexico. — [By Mail.]—The henequen [sisal hemp] plant, for many years the "green gold" of Yucatan, will grow in a tropical climate on rocky, barren soil and with little cultivation. However, being a close relative of the century plant, there is a long wait before it is productive and yields a cash return.

Black area locates state of Yucatan.

To start a sisal crop, the land is cleared, but not plowed. The clearing then is laid out in rows 10 or 12 feet apart and the little shoots stuck in the rows at intervals of 5 or 6 feet, making a total of around 800 plants to the acre, more or less, according to the quality of the soil.

Good farmers will scratch the earth to make a root bed for the shoot, but it will grow ever if stuck in between three rocks to keep it erect. In May or June, during the brief rainy season here, is the time for planting. Weeds are cleared off the ground twice a year and beyond that there is no cultivation.

Tall at Full Growth.

It takes the little shoot from seven to ten years to grow six feet tall, at which point it is ready for the first harvest. At full growth it is 15 to 20 feet tall. Besides each grown plant there sprouts a little shoot which when a foot high is used for new plantings.

When matured the plants will have from thirty to forty-five leaves each. Each swordlike leaf is from 3 to 5 feet long and is set in a cluster like the leaves on a pineapple. A sisal field, from a distance, greatly resembles a mass of huge pineapples standing on their noses.

When the bottom five or six leaves, about two feet above the ground on the stalk, are ready to cut, men with sharp knives go along the rows and whack off the leaves close to the stalk. Each plant will produce from fifteen to twenty leaves per year and has a productive life of about fifteen years.

A Movable Railroad.

Boys follow the cutters, pick up the leaves, and carry them to a cart on the 24 inch gauge railroad which can be shifted at will about the fields. A little mule pulls the carts to the decorticating [stripping] plant.

An endless chain elevator carries the leaves up and dumps them on a conveyor belt. Men arrange the leaves so they will enter the decorticating machine at a certain angle. The machine strips the outer coating from the leaf, disposes of the leaf's waste pulp and fluid, and delivers the brownish, still damp fibers which were the leaf's center.

The fibers are carried outdoors to drying racks, where they remain for five or six hours, depending on the weather. After drying the fibers, brighter yellow now, are graded according to length—the longest fibers are the strongest and command the highest price. The fibers are pressed into bales of 500 pounds each and are ready for shipping.

Wide Variety of Uses.

Yucatan sisal is second only to Manila hemp; it is much stronger than cotton cordage and is used for binder twine, bags, ropes, and matting.

Yucatan's coastal plain, extending to a height of only 200 feet some distance in the interior, is dry and rocky. About 1850, pioneer planters realized the adaptability of the soil to the henequen plant and at the same time a world market developed which Yucatan held alone for many years. The price went up steadily with the years.

To a poverty stricken people, living on top of a strata of limestone and other rock with just enough dirt covering to produce the barest necessities of life, henequen proved a gold mine.

Vast Plantations Created.

The number of planters increased and many accumulated land by the thousands of acres. Vast plantations ranging up to 20,000 acres came into being. Some of the big planters are said to have spent as much as $1,000,000 for their homes. Each plantation was a community within itself with about 150 Indian families and a total population of 700 to 1,000. Around the big hacienda of the owner were churches, schools, stores, the decorticating plants, and the living quarters of the workers.

In addition to their wages, the laborers received their shacks, a garden, a cow, and a pig.

In 1850 Yucatan's export trade was practically nil; in 1915 sales of sisal poured gold into this little paradise. Exports were 1,200,000 bales of sisal. But, Yucatan had become a one-crop country; few improvements had been made in plant or production methods and planters abroad were competing in the world markets. It was at such a time that the government in Mexico began its expropriation program in Yucatan.

Rumble Seat Captive

DONNA LOUISE MARTIN.

[Associated Press Wirephotos.]

The rumble seat in which Miss Martin said she was a willing captive for fifteen days.

Santa Ana, Cal., July 9.—[Special.]—Donna Louise Martin, 15 years old, and her boy friend, Bill Wharton, also 15, were in the custody of juvenile authorities here today. Donna said she had been a willing captive of Bill's in the rumble seat of his car for eleven days, awaiting an opportunity to elope. During her stay in the rumble seat the boy brought her sandwiches and water. The girl's presence in the car was discovered by an 8 year old boy who lives near the Whartons in Seal Beach.

4 KILLED WHEN CAR CHASED BY POLICE CRASHES

Auburn, Mass., July 9.—(AP)—Four persons were killed and four others were injured today in the collision of two automobiles—one leisurely en route from Portland, Me., to New York and the other being pursued by police at an 80 mile an hour pace.

The dead were William Prendergast, 25 years old, and Edward Pranskunas, 39, both of Worcester, speeding in what State Police Sergeant Thomas Burke said was a car carrying burglars' tools, and Arthur Resnick, 30, and his mother, Mrs. Helen Resnick, 66, of Portland, riding in the other car.

Sergeant Burke said the eighth person in the accident, booked as Leo Leblanc, 25, of Worcester, was arrested on charges of possessing burglars' tools, theft of an automobile, and carrying firearms without a permit. Leblanc was cut on his hands and face. Two state troopers reported they were pursuing a car they identified as one reported stolen last night in Worcester when it failed to make a curve and crashed into the Maine automobile.

STATE FARMERS EXPECT BUMPER CROP OF CORN

Growth Is Far Ahead of Normal, Survey Shows.

BY HOMER NEISZ.

Illinois farmers anticipate their third successive good crop of corn. The corn has grown unusually fast during recent weeks and over most of the state is ten days or two weeks ahead of normal for this time of year.

The growth has upset the old tradition of the corn belt that corn should be "knee high by the Fourth of July." Most of it was more than waist high on the Fourth this year.

Virtually all the corn in the central and northern parts of the state is too tall to cultivate. Some is tasseling as far north as the Wisconsin line. The crop is much farther advanced than usual in the counties near Chicago.

High Yields Predicted.

A crop survey tour last week of nearly 400 miles through much of the best corn land in Illinois found farmers all along the way encouraged by the condition of the corn. Farmers in McLean, Livingston, and La Salle counties, the leading corn growing counties of the state, say that only continued favorable weather is needed for corn yields equal to those of the last two years. Exceptionally high yields are predicted in many sections.

Last year the 8,430,000 acres of corn in Illinois yielded an average of forty-five bushels an acre. In 1937 Illinois farmers produced an average of forty-eight bushels an acre, the highest average of any state in the country that year.

The 1937 crop from 9,367,000 acres amounted to 449,616,000 bushels. The state's crop this year totals only approximately 8,093,000 acres, according to latest official figures.

Rains Hurt Northern Area.

Corn prospects over the northern half of the state are not quite so bright as they were a week ago. Excessive rains in many sections last week, especially along river valleys, caused considerable damage. Creeks and rivers overflowed and swept through corn fields in the bottom lands.

There also has been too much rain for the corn on some of the level land in southern La Salle county and in parts of Livingston, Ford, Iroquois, Vermilion, Kankakee and Will counties in the eastern part of the state between Chicago and Champaign. Water has stood too long in low places in the fields, stunting the growth of the corn. Water from the heavy rains of last Thursday and Friday still is standing in many fields in that section.

Many farmers believe that the corn may be too far advanced for this early in the season. They fear that unless the heavy rains continue for the next few weeks the corn may suffer for lack of moisture when the ears start forming.

Much of Land Packed Hard.

Much of the corn land has been packed hard by the heavy rains. Farmers say that with the soil in that condition it would dry out rapidly if the rains cease.

Farmers in some sections believe, however, that the crop would mature without further rains. They say that the advanced state of the corn and the abundance of moisture in the soil should insure a good crop, regardless of rains for the rest of the summer. There is little fear of the crop being damaged by frost next fall. Farmers say that a high percentage of the crop should mature well ahead of the usual time for early frosts.

Chinchbugs have started moving into corn fields in many sections since small grains were harvested, but no serious damage to the corn has been observed.

FIREMEN'S WORK TO BE DESCRIBED ON W-G-N TODAY

Aid of Chief to Give Thrill Show Preview.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Your radio this week will bring you the voices of three men who are among the leaders in building the second annual Police and Fire Thrill show, which will be held next Sunday afternoon in Soldiers' field.

But these men are not mere showmen. Showmanship is not even in their line. Theirs is the grim business of fighting crime and fire, the city's two great enemies. The three are Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan, Deputy Chief Fire Marshal Anthony J. Mullaney, and Chief James B. Kerr of the Chicago park district police.

Chief Mullaney Speaks Today.

Chief Mullaney's voice will come to you first during June Baker's program on station W-G-N at 11:45 a. m. today. This voice, as you will hear it, will be crisp and modulated. But you should hear it during a 3-11 alarm fire.

Aerial ladder trucks, powerful pumpers, water towers, high pressure wagons, and squad trucks are plunging in the smoke filled street. To the eye of the layman all is hopeless confusion. Hose lines are being snaked out to cross and recross. Then Mullaney arrives. Here's what happens—in the words of a reporter who once witnessed such a scene:

"Here came Mullaney in a white helmet, still fastening his rubber coat. He took in everything at one glance, then he started giving orders. You could have heard him ten blocks. Those hose lines straightened out. Every piece of apparatus slipped into just the right place.

Mullaney Leads the Way.

"In thirty seconds the men were in the building. And who do you think went in first? Mullaney. It was a big warehouse building and the fire had a good start, but it was out so quickly all the spectators were disappointed."

On June Baker's program this morning, Chief Mullaney will tell something of the perils and thrills of fire fighting and how they will be reproduced at Sunday's show. He also will explain how citizens can assist the fire department in keeping the city safe.

To Chief Kerr is entrusted the mighty task of keeping safe the parks and the miles of boulevards that surround them. This does not mean merely keeping them safe for motorists and pedestrians.

Parks Cleaned Out.

Confidence men, robbers, and many other types of criminals in years past made the parks their hunting ground. But this is not true today.

Chief Kerr will tell how the parks are policed and will give some previews of Sunday's thrill show, when he is interviewed Wednesday on the Tomorrow's Tribune program on W-G-N at 8:30 p. m.

Chief Sullivan probably knows more about more criminals than any other man in Chicago. As head of the detective bureau, he is familiar with their faces, their traits, and their peculiarities.

Chief Sullivan's office is a great clearing house of Chicago crime. The men who work under him tackle the big ones—murders, kidnapings, bombings, robberies, extortion, and arson. Under his control are the heavily armed squad cars that could besiege a fortress with their gas bombs, gas guns, machine guns, and bulletproof steel shields.

The part these cars and the squads that man them are to take in the hijacker gun fight that climaxes the thrill show will be told by Chief Sullivan. He also will tell how the public can help its police department in wiping out crime. He will be heard on the Tomorrow's Tribune program at 8:30 p. m. Friday.

The first block of tickets for the show was bought late last week by Mayor Kelly. The Thrill show is sponsored by the police and fire departments, the park district police, and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

CHICAGO TO LONDON.

The Pan-American Clippers are now flying on regular schedule to Europe. Years of preparation made the achievement possible, years in which our government has been kept in constant touch with the company's progress.

In all that time, it might be supposed, our state department and the Civil Aeronautics authority would have made some effort to provide an air line from Chicago, close to the center of the nation's population and at the center of its domestic air lines, to connect with the trans-Atlantic service at Shediac in New Brunswick or Botwood, Newfoundland. The flying time from Chicago to either of these stations by land plane is little, if any greater, than by seaplane from New York. Accordingly, if the service were available, Chicago would be substantially on a parity with New York in trans-Atlantic passenger, mail, and express service.

Naturally the United States cannot expect Canada to authorize American ships to fly over Canadian territory without granting a corresponding right to Canadian ships to fly over the same route into Chicago. For reasons which are far from clear our government has authorized Canadian use of an airway from Montreal to Shediac over northern Maine without getting anything substantial in return. There is no direct air service from Chicago to Montreal, and the Canadian line from Montreal to Shediac, though authorized, has not yet been inaugurated. What is needed, of course, is an arrangement for through service from Chicago to Montreal to Shediac to Botwood.

The problem of getting such a line started would not be difficult to solve if the will to solve it were present. The trouble lies partly in the fact that our state department contains too many amateur Englishmen who have only a dim realization that there is a portion of America west of the Alleghanies which is not inhabited by Indians; and partly in the fact that the burocrats of the Civil Aeronautics authority are so busy inventing meddlesome regulations to retard the progress of flying that they haven't time left to promote a much needed service.

STREAMLINED PIANOS.

Although long suffering business continues to be stifled by the rules, regulations, regimentation, and ever increasing taxes laid on it by continually expanding government burocracy, here and there an entire industry is able to offset these restrictions by sheer ingenuity and courage.

The piano manufacturing industry is an example. In 1932 and 1933 there were many piano manufacturers who feared that the end was at hand for most of them. The introduction of the phonograph and radio, the increasing popularity of entertainment outside the home, the ever greater mobility of our population which required many persons to dispense with such heavy equipment as a piano, and finally, the exactions of government in new taxes and requirements, had seemed to doom the business.

In May, 1935, however, led by an editorial campaign in the Piano Trade magazine, published in Chicago, the piano industry brought out a new streamlined instrument. This type was especially suited to the smaller apartment and the smaller purse common to the era of the "more abundant life." Modern styling and new type engineering made possible the production of a piano that looked better and sounded better than the old fashioned upright. The move represented extreme courage in trying times.

The result was almost miraculous. The dying industry had obtained a much needed transfusion. Total piano shipments rose from 47,193 in 1934 to 65,086 in 1935. In 1936, when the new models were available throughout the year, shipments totaled 90,358. In 1937 there were 106,009 pianos shipped from piano manufacturers to dealers. Last year the recession cut the total to 90,000, but sales to date in 1939 lead the industry to anticipate out-factory shipments of 126,000 units.

This revival has put thousands of persons to work and is bringing the joys of music into thousands of new homes, many of which could not afford a piano at all if the ingenuity of the industry had not found means to defeat increasing costs and mounting taxes.

The government is doing all right in the piano business, too. One large manufacturer on March 31 reported a net profit of $1.79 a share. The government got $1.28 a share in taxes, exclusive of the taxes on real estate and personal property held by the company.

THE ROOSEVELT DYNASTY.

The senate judiciary committee was tied up, 7 to 7, on a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment limiting the tenure of a President to one term of six years. The resolution therefore will be laid before the senate without recommendation and the senators, if they care to, may vote on the question.

The proposal to submit such an amendment to the people will, of course, have no bearing upon the question as it may be raised in the Democratic national convention of 1940. A declaration from congress might have some sentimental interest and conceivably some effect, but nothing can be done now to be of consequence in the decision regarding the third term.

If Mr. Roosevelt decides to reign as well as rule, the constitution thereafter may be of as little importance to the American people as the Weimar constitution was to the German, and a government of the Roosevelts, by the Roosevelts, for the Roosevelts shall not perish from the earth.

THE STATE OF THE ARMY.

Gen. Malin Craig, in the annual report that marked his retirement from active duty as chief of staff of the army, displayed his usual diplomacy. The report gives the most space to detailing improvements during the last twelve months. Nevertheless, it leaves the impression that the army today is not prepared, either in equipment or personnel, to defend the United States against a major attack.

Gen. Craig stated the deficiencies, as has been said, in diplomatic language. Sometimes they are made known by inference rather than direct statement. Prudence, however, dictates that his recommendations, both direct and implied, be followed as quickly as possible.

One paragraph in particular in the report should be read carefully by all civilians, who are much too prone to the belief that all that is required for national defense is appropriations by congress. As Gen. Craig points out, they forget the time element.

"I wish to stress again," he says, "the time element in preparation for war. This is an immensely rich nation, but all of its wealth, all of its industrial capacity, all of its intelligent manpower, is helpless before the inexorable demands of time in manufacture and training. . . . As an instance, the sums appropriated this last year will not be fully transformed into military power for two years. This fact, that it takes years to resolve the will of the people into efficiently handled munitions of war, must be remembered."

It is in the light of this essential time element that a number of the deficiencies of the army, both in equipment and personnel, become apparent from Gen. Craig's report. Most serious is the fact that we have not sufficient reserves of purely military equipment and munitions, not available from commercial services, to supply the army of 1,000,000 men contemplated by the protective mobilization plan until industry can be put on a war basis.

The air force has been expanded, but still lags in both housing and maintenance facilities. Without the latter, planes in the air are virtually useless. Motorization, both of the regular army and the National Guard, is only 80 per cent completed. There is no bottleneck, of course, in the nation's motor manufacturing facilities, but training of units to use their new equipment might occasion most serious delays.

Appropriations have been made for the new semi-automatic rifle for the infantry, for small mortars and anti-tank guns, various machine guns and gas masks have all been voted. But here again the problem of turning appropriations into arms is difficult, and the two year waiting period that Gen. Craig mentions, where it applies, is a serious handicap to efficiency.

Authorization by congress, while it looks well in print, means nothing until appropriations are voted to put the authorization into effect. Congress has authorized an increase of the enlisted strength of the army from 165,000 to 200,000 men, but the current appropriation is for only 165,000 men. Gen. Craig recommends a further increase of 23,000 men and 1,800 officers to permit the army to maintain five divisions in the continental United States at peace strength, ready for instant movement to the advanced posts of our national defenses. We now have no complete divisions so available on the mainland.

Gen. Craig recommends also a number of reforms in personnel, of which the compulsory retirement of officers who fail to achieve promotion on reaching a certain age is most important. The war department is now sponsoring a bill to require retirement of 4.35 per cent of the officer corps annually. The primary purpose is to liquidate the famous "hump," composed of officers who remained in service following the world war, which is a bar to steady promotion of officers in this group and to all commissioned after them.

The report also recommends that consideration be given to use of noncommissioned officers as pilots in the air corps. This is a step that THE TRIBUNE urged editorially several years ago.

Gen. Craig also urges consideration of the merger of the mobile units, at least, of the coast artillery with the field artillery, as conducing to better administration and tactics, and the transfer of army construction supervision from the quartermaster corps, which is amply occupied with problems of supply, to the corps of engineers.

The report also recommends equalization of army rates of pay for enlisted men with those of the navy. This inequality has long been a sore point with the army. The navy has maintained, with considerable accuracy, that it required a more skilled personnel, which not only had to operate intricate machinery but frequently was called upon to repair it at sea. With the increased mechanization of all branches of the army, this disparity between the two forces is much narrower than formerly.

Editorial of the Day

FIRST THINGS FIRST.

[Providence, R. I., Bulletin.]

Vice President Garner, classified as a conservative Democrat, is willing to go further than Senator La Follette, Progressive, in broadening the basis of the income tax. Vice President Garner is reported as advocating the lowering of exemption for married couples from $2,500 to $1,200 and for single persons from $1,000 to $500. Such a cut would bring more than 2,000,000 people not paying a direct tax into the income tax group.

Mr. Garner is following the same line of thought as Senator La Follette: That while the revenue for the federal government from this change is desirable, the primary purpose is to make a large and powerful group tax conscious. Direct taxation stirs the wrath of men and women more potently than does indirect taxation, which has been described as plucking the goose without making him squawk. It would have a salutary effect.

But at the rate the government is spending money today and intends to continue spending money it's like whistling against the wind to propose more and more taxation. If this nation is ever to get its finances into proper shape, balance the budget, and start to pay off the unwholesome debt the start must be made not on the taxation end but with retrenchment, by cutting down expenditures to coincide with revenues. This country, as rich as it is, cannot stand a 9 billion dollar budget year in and year out. Unless there is reduction in spending that is the unlovely prospect. Let's get first things first.

Conductor's Witticism.

Sir Adrian Boult was rehearsing the orchestra at Ravinia in an Elgar number.

"There is the rattle of the cathedral windows in this number," he said. Then, looking toward the tympanum section, "not too much rattle, though."

Composer's Problem.

Arthur Bliss, the English composer who was at Ruth Page's party after the Ravinia concert the other evening, along with Sir Adrian Boult, David Van Vactor, Janet Fairbank, former Vienna Opera Conductor Alvin and other musical personages, was asked a question about H. G. Wells, for whose movie The Shape of Things to Come he wrote the score. He said that one day Wells came out to his—Bliss'—home in Hampstead to hear the music Bliss had written for a part of the cinema which is supposed to describe the building of a city entirely by machinery. Wells listened to the six minute movement. Then he said drily:

"But you know the machinery of the future will make no noise at all."

CHILE OPENS DOOR TO REFUGEES

BY NORMAN INGREY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile.—Chile, under a Popular Front government, has become a haven for refugee Jews and Spaniards. It is the only South American country which has permitted Jews to enter by hundreds. Many states, Argentina, Brazil, Peru, and Ecuador among them, have practically closed the doors to these immigrants.

President Pedro Aguirre has announced that admission to Chile would be refused those persons whom he classified as "nonproducers," but nearly every non-German and non-Italian ship that has arrived recently in Valparaiso has brought a large percentage of Jewish refugees of the professional classes. British and Dutch steamship arrivals have carried a majority of such passengers.

A sixty day suspension of immigrant applications also was announced last March, but so far there is no sign of any reduced rate of admission, though many leaders of the dominant Frontist party are complaining.

German propagandists, aware of rising opposition to Jewish arrivals, especially among out-of-office rightists, began to circulate anti-Semitic literature. The Aguirre government stopped this open revolt against its immigration policy by deporting Hans Voigt, chief of the German state railroad tourist office here. He was accused of campaigning against the Jews.

Many of the refugees have found employment as tutors in Chilean and foreign families or as teachers in colleges and schools. Agencies have appeared which place domestic servants. All craftsmen have found jobs because there is a shortage of these. The government is willing to make agricultural allotments in the far south for suitable Jewish families.

Under the former rightist coalition régime of President Arturo Alessandri it was difficult for Jews to enter the country. A consul in Paris told an applicant that it was "useless to apply for a Chilean visa if you are a Jew." If any general instructions were given on the subject, these have been revoked by the Popular Front government.

Jews have been coming in so fast, however, that President Aguirre has persuaded his supporters to subordinate partly their humanitarian and democratic doctrines to the demands of professionals and retail traders who fear they will be submerged by refugee competition.

There is more general alarm over the prospect of importing several hundred Spanish refugees. The Chileans now in power, radicals, Socialists, and communists, wish to show practical sympathy for the vanquished Republicans, whose lives would be endangered if they returned to Spain.

Rightists fear that the arrival of Spanish extremists in Chile will strengthen the militant Socialists in the local popular front and possibly precipitate a class war.

HOW SULFANILAMIDE WORKS.

JUDGING from the voluminous correspondence directed to this department, physicians everywhere are now employing sulfanilamide or one of its derivatives. The inquiries concern themselves with its safety and ultimate effects. Wonder is expressed that so powerful a remedy can be harmless. As one put it, "It must be damaging to certain organs else it would not paralyze so completely germs floating in the circulation."

It has been shown clearly that the compound is of the greatest value in combating streptococcic infections, particularly the type which destroys red blood cells. Furthermore, it is of considerable benefit in meningitis [streptococcic], peritonitis, erysipelas, or general infections in many parts of the body. If colon bacilli are found in the urine it works for their annihilation. In undulant fever—which follows the use of unpasteurized milk from diseased cows—it is the best curative agent so far discovered.

Inflammation coming on after childbirth—puerperal fever—has cost hundreds of thousands of lives. While clean surgery and better training on the part of medical men has reduced the incidence of this malady appreciably, it has remained the most dreaded complication of motherhood. One of the first ailments to be attacked with sulfanilamide, it has yielded promptly in many cases to its influence.

Lest we be misled, it should be stated that the substance is not a universal panacea. It has very little, if any, virtue in arthritis, rheumatism, endocarditis, or influenza.

Answering the questions, "Are there poisonous possibilities? If so, what?" it should be stated that some patients display symptoms of nausea, vomiting, and dizziness. For the most part these manifestations pass if the dose is reduced or is omitted for a few hours. Many of these signs will not become evident if an equal quantity of sodium bicarbonate is given at the same time. On the other hand, if a marked anemia is detected and, in addition, a drop in the white cells, the drug should be stopped—at least temporarily—and extract of liver administered.

Many will complain of cyanosis—the tips of the fingers and the lips becoming bluish in shade. As a rule, this is unimportant unless there is a real decrease in the oxygen-carrying power of the circulation. Some authorities believe that this is due to changes in the hemoglobin [the red coloring matter] but this theory has not been proved. With a few individuals the influence on the blood of long continued administration cannot be ignored. Apparently it can slow down the activities of the red cell factories. At any rate, the corpuscles appear to dissolve far more rapidly than they should, with resulting anemia and, in some instances, jaundice.

Still another reaction is a secondary fever which will persist as long as the dye is continued. This curious anomaly is difficult to understand.

Now that the worst side of the picture has been presented it should be clear that most persons can take the preparation, even for long periods, without the slightest risk. In fact, if indications of poisoning are not noted within the first few days, it seems that many a patient will develop a tolerance which is protective. This has been observed particularly in pneumonia—in which sulfapyridine has been unusually successful. While the digestive tracts of some persons may rebel against it, the use of small doses at the outset will allay these symptoms. Later the full complement may be given.

As with most new remedies, enthusiasm may lead us astray. With more experience we may learn how to utilize necessary safeguards. But it is not a foolproof chemical and in prescribing it the doctor must not relax his vigilance for a moment. Against many rapidly spreading germs, however, it is a lifesaving aid.

IT'S JUST A HABIT.

E. C. writes: What causes my 3 year old son to wake up in the night and play at least two hours? He may awaken any time after 12 o'clock and sit up or lie singing or talking for a long time. He makes up for this by sleeping late. These occasional episodes have persisted for nearly a year.

REPLY.

Thank your lucky stars he is playful, not fretful. The whole matter has nothing to do with health. It is a habit which you can correct. Waken him at the usual time in the morning, arrange for an afternoon nap, and put him to bed a bit later in the evening. He will then be tired enough to sleep the night through.

BABIES IMMUNE, AS A RULE.

M. E. C. writes: Is it possible for a child 6 weeks old to contract whooping cough?

REPLY.

As a rule, infants—particularly if breast fed—possess a natural immunity to the ordinary contagious diseases. This persists for at least six months.

HEIRS TO ESTATE.

Chicago, July 7.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My mother died recently. There were two children—myself, the son and [1] also a daughter who died. The deceased daughter's [2] husband and [3] her daughter are both living. The husband has married twice since my sister's death.

4. Are both the husband and daughter of my sister considered heirs?

If her daughter only is an heir to share [5] would the husband have to be notified or consulted for any reason?

6. There is a will, and the son and granddaughter only are mentioned as heirs.

7. If the witnesses to the will are dead and no one can be found who can identify the signatures, would that give the husband rights as an heir? S. H.

1 We assume that you mean that she died before her mother.
2. He would not inherit from his mother-in-law.
3. She would inherit from her grandmother.
4. See 2 and 3.
5 We see no need for it.
6. The wording of the will would control.
7. No.

USURPING POWER.

Chicago, July 6.—It is strange that no one has seriously challenged the constitutionality of the power of the President to value the money which the constitution vests in congress. The right to coin money and fix the value thereof is the duty of congress, and the question arises whether congress can delegate this power to the President.

Mr. Justice Gray, speaking for the court in Juilliard vs. Greenman, 110 U. S. 421, said: "The constitutional authority of congress to provide a currency for the whole country is now firmly established." In the case of Hepburn vs. Griswald the court said: "We have already said, and it is generally, if not universally conceded, that the government of the United States is one of limited powers, and that no department possesses any authority not granted by the constitution."

Many more cases of like import could be cited. The conclusion is that the devaluation of the money by the President is an unlawful usurpation of the power and authority granted exclusively to congress. HARRY GOODMAN.

RUDE TICKET SELLERS.

Chicago, July 5.—The "Impudence on the 'L'" impels me to add my comment, although I have never before written a letter to your column in my twenty years' residence in Chicago.

I have never seen instances of greater rudeness than I have witnessed while sitting in "L" stations waiting for trains. It would seem that these elderly women are chosen for their ability to discourage inquirers, and especially for their ability to do it rudely and impudently. I have had my face burn with shame more than once at the unnecessarily snappy and insufficient replies given by one of these supposedly fellow Americans to some perplexed inquirer, often a foreigner.

These women display a total lack of feeling for an individual who inquires in perfect good faith for information which he has every right to expect of the only visible representative of the public utility he is patronizing. The instances I have in mind have not been at rush hours but at times when there was no apparent excuse but just "orneriness" on the part of these ticket sellers. HAZEL C. AUSTIN.

EXPLAINING GUFFEY AND ICKES.

Chicago, July 5.—And now comes Guffey to add to the arguments so naively put forth by Ickes as to why we should have Roosevelt saddled upon us for another four year term. It is perfectly obvious that many, many of these men who were carted into office on Roosevelt's coat-tails and who in their own right could probably not rate election for dog-catcher in their home communities are beginning to worry about where the sustenance is to come from after 1940. They should. F. F. MOLT.

PROFITABLE TO THE HOUSE.

Chicago, July 5.—In regard to a recent letter in your column about the 26 dice game: I ran one of these games near the city hall for ten years until Mayor Harrison had them all closed up about 1933. The game took in one to four hundred dollars a day. Our book showed for every $100 we took in we paid out only $70 in trade. The tokens we gave were honored anywhere in the house for liquor, cigars, cigarets, or pay your lunch bill with them. C. W.

RACKETS IN INSURANCE?

Joliet, Ill., July 5.—I was interested in the recent letter "Racket in Auto Repairs." With due sympathy for the writer I fear some insurance companies have a far better racket than that.

Recently while playing golf at White Pines Golf club near Bensenville the rear fender of my car was practically torn off by another golf enthusiast, who left his name and address with the parking attendant with instructions to tell me he was fully insured.

He being decent enough to do that, I tried returning the gesture by having the dents removed and the fender repainted rather than buying a new fender as I really should have done. The bill was only $7.50, which the insurance company later tells me was an outrageous thing to pay for such work. However, they would gladly pay 50 per cent or $3.75. In other words, a person pays for full coverage insurance and rates are based on that fact, yet how is a 50 per cent settlement the same as being fully insured?

It looks to me like a racket worthy of Mr. Courtney's serious attention, for I've heard of many similar cases. The person damaged has no recourse except in court and a third grader can figure out that you can't afford to sue for such a small sum. Or did some insurance company executive figure that out before I thought of it? W. S. R.

THE ROOSEVELTS AND COMMUNISM.

Chicago, July 7.—The First Lady of the Land, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, approved the creed adopted by the American Youth congress condemning Fascism and Nazism, but which refused to condemn communism. Likewise she and President Roosevelt approve the Workers' alliance, a communistic organization representing WPA and so proven. They both approve the WPA theater projects and by her recent remarks that it is better to feed communists than permit them to go hungry, admits it is communistic. No communist or fellow traveler will want under the sympathetic influence of the Roosevelt régime.

Can any one doubt that the Roosevelts are sympathetic toward communism?

It is the communist method to seek public office by the ballot and if elected attempt by parliamentary rules to change our form of government, but is it Americanism to appoint communist or fellow travelers to important offices as President Roosevelt persists in doing? Should our government hire individuals who are intent on throwing it overboard?

Finally, can any one conceive of a Republican administration "wet nursing" and assisting both financially and by their acts the communist or any form of ism? H. F. KORS.

WHO SHALL DECIDE?

Chicago, July 5.—Shall congress, as the constitution provides, retain the authority to determine the course this country may take regarding war; or shall F. D. Roosevelt individually do that? Hitler decides such questions; so does Mussolini; but this is still the United States. This government is "the democracy of a republic" and not the "dictatorship of a Roosevelt."

A. B. SHROPSHIRE.

PICTURING THE NEW DEAL.

Chicago, July 6.—Does Dorothy G. Williamson think she is the only intelligent person in this country? There are thousands who agree with the TRIBUNE about the New Deal and its policies, and we didn't have to read the TRIBUNE to make our decisions. We just know the New Deal hasn't worked out right; it has destroyed small business firms, caused more men to kill themselves than anything we ever had. It has aided the C. I. O., thrown hundreds of thousands out of work, paying a sum to the dictator, Lewis.

And when we hear the silver tongue of our President talking about caring for the poor, what has he done? He's never known hunger; he hasn't the slightest idea of poverty. He agreed to let the crops be plowed under, with people starving; he was willing to see small pigs butchered and destroyed, while men were wanting meat. Is that the kind of man to show aid to poor people? If Miss Williamson had a business, no matter how small, and the government taxes ate into it until she was forced out, she might think more of the TRIBUNE articles.

A. M. TURNER.

SLUMS: IS THERE A REMEDY?

Chicago, July 6.—Your editorial, "Prairie to Slum to Prairie," moves me to inquire: [1] Whether a requirement that all city employés must live within the city limits, likewise those making the city their headquarters for business, would not be of value. [2] Whether the assessment of all improvements for outlying areas of the city against that area, likewise its share of city expenses, would not prevent the development of slum areas within the city limits—usually just about the business center.

The lottery plan in my judgment is "bad" on every count. The government housing plans serve not those whose meagerness of income has necessitated their living in such areas, but a much higher and wholly sufficient income-earning group who occupy the rebuilt areas. This forces the under-income group to crowd more closely into already overcrowded areas, and usually increases the "slum" area somewhere else. NORMAN B. BARR.

UNBOTTLING THE LARYNX.

Chicago, July 4.—Congratulations on your recent editorial on Social Singing. We need more publicity—humorous, serious, or otherwise—to furnish a healthy stimulant to the good cause involved. Not every one can play a piano, a violin, or flute, but he is making a better start for his day's work as a good citizen if he makes it a daily practice to unbottle his larynx as a proper part of his setting up exercises.

A commendable purpose is served in the serious effort now being made in many communities to further chorus and community singing.

To "Keep America Singing" is the aim and endeavor of the National Federation of Music Clubs, and the thanks of all those who are musically conscious go to THE TRIBUNE for its commendable work of promotion in this direction.

MRS. FRANK P. WHITMORE,
President, Chicago District, Illinois Federation of Music Clubs.

TRACTION LINES TO PUSH DEMAND FOR 8c CAR FARE

Franchise Arguments to Be Given City Today.

The arguments of transit lines in support of their unified traction franchise proposal, including an 8 cent street car fare, will be submitted today to the local transportation committee of the city council.

Their proposal, under which one modernized company would operate the surface, elevated, and bus lines was received two weeks ago by the city and was called unreasonable by aldermen.

The arguments were prepared by the three man transit negotiating committee which drafted the companies' franchise recommendations.

The chief controversial points are: The 1 cent increase in street car fares, the valuation of properties, terms of compensation to the city for use of streets, a financing plan that involves use of the traction fund, treatment of employé pensions, and extensions of routes.

Indicate Expected Replies.

Information from sources close to the negotiators indicates that their arguments on the controversial points will shape up as follows:

RATES OF FARES—The companies, having asked that street car fares be increased from 7 to 8 cents, and proposed a 10 cent fare for express buses, elevated lines and subways, will argue that earnings on the present 7 cent street car fare are insufficient to support the proposed new company.

In 1938 the combined net income of the surface, elevated, and bus lines, before interest or dividend requirements had been set aside, was about $4,400,000. In 1937 earnings on the same basis approximated $6,000,000.

Need Extra Million in Fares.

Interest and preferred dividend requirements, the lines will show, would amount to nearly $9,000,000 a year on the basis of the proposed setup of the new company. This would mean that the earnings of the new company under existing fares probably would fall several million dollars short of paying bond interest and preferred dividends, let alone provide for proposed compensation to the city and proposed pension fund requirements. Under an 8 cent fare, the unified company would earn slightly more than $10,000,000, or enough to cover interest and dividends, according to estimates made by Shaw last year.

VALUATION—The companies have proposed a valuation of $220,000,000 for the properties of the surface lines and elevated lines.

Today's data will point out that the total book value of the properties now is about $271,500,000, made up of $171,500,000 for the surface lines on the basis of valuation methods set up under the 1907 ordinance and $100,000,000 for the elevated lines. The proposed valuation, it will be argued, involves a $50,000,000 writedown.

CITY COMPENSATION—The franchise proposal provided that 3 per cent of the unified company's gross revenues would be paid to the city, but only after interest and preferred dividends have been paid.

Fear Financial Jeopardy.

The companies' data will show that estimated revenues for the system even with an increased fare, will be scarcely more than the amount required to pay interest and dividends. If city compensation should be made an operating expense to be paid before the return to investors [this is the city's suggestion] the investors' return would be endangered and money would be hard to obtain, the companies will say.

FINANCING OF MODERNIZATION—The negotiators proposed to buy 1,000 new rapid transit cars, 2,100 street cars and 500 buses, in addition to modernizing and rehabilitating elevated structures and making subway connections.

Plan 95 Million Modernization.

The cost of this program, which was not estimated in the lines' franchise recommendation, will be about $95,000,000. The companies proposed that $20,000,000 of the new money be taken from the city's traction fund. They are expected to propose today that another $30,000,000 be taken from the cash reserves of the surface lines and that the new company borrow the additional $45,000,000. The issuance of equipment trust certificates will be proposed to raise the latter sum.

USE OF TRACTION FUND—In arguing for the use of $20,000,000 from the traction fund to help finance the unified transit program the companies probably will point out that the 1907 ordinance provided that the fund be used for the benefit of the car riders and that this is the purpose to which they now propose that it be put.

PENSIONS — The companies proposed that the new company be given twenty-four months to work out a pension plan acceptable to the company and to the employés.

Must Work Out Expenses First.

The request for time will be based on the argument that the unified company must determine its revenues and expenses under unification before it can commit itself to a pension program costing millions of dollars each year.

EXTENSIONS—The proposal called for twenty-five bus route extensions, eight new express bus routes and twenty-five substitutions of buses for street cars. The city wants more.

The companies will reply that these are substantially all of the extensions and substitutions now advisable and that additional ones should await a study of the revenues and costs after making proposed extensions.

TERMINABLE FRANCHISE — The franchise proposed would run indefinitly unless its provisions were violated by the companies.

The companies will argue that under a franchise for a predetermined number of years, the company would not be able to raise money for several years before the known expiration date, because of the uncertainty of a franchise renewal. They also will point out that the city has an option to purchase the properties under the proposal.

GIRL, 20, KILLED, THREE HURT AS CAR OVERTURNS

Auto Crashes After Skidding on Road.

A girl was killed yesterday and her three companions were injured, two seriously, when the automobile in which they were riding skidded and overturned on a curve on highway 6, four miles southwest of Joliet. The girl who was killed was Miss Renee Sukiemik, 20 years old, 9353 Manistee avenue.

The two seriously injured are Michael Zerebing, 23, of 8323 Mackinaw avenue, and Joseph Mikolejczyk, 21, of 8306 Mackinaw avenue. Miss Wanda Cihoin, 17, of 8600 Escanaba avenue, was slightly injured. The three were taken to St. Joseph's hospital in Joliet.

Two Killed in Crash.

Two men were killed last night in a crash of automobiles at McCarthy and Wolf roads, southwest of Chicago. They were J. W. Hammotree, 54 years old, of 5833 South Spaulding avenue, and Forest Riley, 38, of Carlock in McLean county. Hammotree was the driver of one of the cars. Riley was a passenger in the other, driven by Louis A. Weinmann, 30 years old, 5118 Dorchester avenue. Weinmann was injured.

Robert Nelles, his wife, Anna, and their daughter, Sally Ann, escaped with minor injuries yesterday when their automobile overturned twice after being struck by one driven by a weaving motorist. Nelles, who lives at 1610 North Mason avenue, was driving west in Washington boulevard at California avenue when the accident occurred. Dominick Biaselli, 32 years old, 1532 Ohio street, the other driver, fled but was overtaken by a police squad and charged with reckless driving, driving without a license, and leaving the scene of an accident.

Thirty-five young Chicagoans, on their way home from a party in the Indiana dunes, were bruised and cut last evening when the body of a truck on which they were riding tipped over and was torn from its chassis at 141st street and Industrial boulevard, East Chicago. All were tossed to the pavement. Six of the party, young women, were given treatment at St. Catherine's hospital in East Chicago. The accident was attributed to a sudden shifting of the weight of the merrymakers as they rounded a corner. Frank Hudson of 3831 Cottage Grove avenue was the driver of the vehicle.

William A. Kelly Jr., 20 years old, escaped injury yesterday in an automobile collision at Vanderpoel avenue and 97th street. Police said that Kelly, who lives at 10024 Damen avenue, is a nephew of Mayor Kelly. Miss Leona Hoefer, 21 years old, was in the other car. She was treated for slight injuries at the Little Company of Mary hospital. Miss Hoefer lives at Lafayette, Ind.

Dies of Old Injuries.

Miss Mabel Brown, 54 years old, colored, of 4644 Champlain avenue, died in the United States Marine hospital of injuries incurred May 3 when she was hit by a truck at 51st and State street. The driver was Carl Johnson, 2712 Milwaukee avenue.

Lawrence Beensterboer Jr., 14 years old, 9913 South La Salle street, and his cousin, Lillian Perkins, 15 years old, of Comstock, Mich., were seriously injured last night when they were struck by an automobile at 100th street and Michigan avenue. The driver was Thomas B. Sytsma, 40 East 101st street. The boy and girl were running across the street to seek shelter from a heavy local shower when the accident occurred.

Up to 4 p. m. yesterday 424 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since the first of the year. Of these 330 were killed in Chicago, where 10,767 were injured in the same period.

Chicago's 1939 Trafic Toll

More than 98% of the city's automobile fatalities are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway.

Business Dull, but Bandits Enliven Things in Tavern

Business wasn't brisk last night in the tavern at 1142 South Canal street and the owner, Miss Marie Shult, gave her personal attention to two customers. As she stopped at a table in a booth to take their orders one of the men struck her on the head with a pistol and the other took $250 from the pocket of her dress. The pair fled after seizing $20 more from the cash register. Miss Shult said she had intended to use the $250 in paying her tavern license fee today.

CHARGES NAMES OF DEAD FORGED IN L. S. U. TANGLE

Federal Agents Arrest Another Caldwell Aid.

Baton Rouge, La., July 9.—[Special.]—Charges that the names of dead officials were forged to bonds, coupled with Gov. Earl K. Long's demand that every guilty person be sent to prison, today emphasized with other developments the far-reaching spread of the Louisiana State university scandal.

Attorney General David M. Ellison announced that the name of former Gov. O. K. Allen, who died in office in January, 1936, had been forged to $118,000 in university bonds used by Dr. James Monroe Smith in market operations while he was president of the university. He added that $502,000 in bonds are missing.

J. Fair Hardin, special assistant attorney general, announced that investigation thus far establishes forgery of the minutes of the board of supervisors of the state university, forgery of an entire issue of bonds amounting to $475,000, and forgery of Gov. Allen's signature to hundreds of bonds of two other series.

Legislature May Act.

Gov. Long intimated that the state legislature may be summoned in special session. Hardin said that Long told him: "I don't want anybody made a goat. I don't want any innocent person persecuted, but I want everybody who is guilty sent to the penitentiary."

Eugene Barksdale, assistant construction superintendent at the university, was arrested today on federal charges of conspiracy to divert WPA labor and material for private use. George Caldwell, Barksdale's deposed superior, and James Marshall, a WPA foreman, already are under arrest on similar charges.

Smith remains in the East Baton Rouge parish jail, having abandoned efforts to make $50,000 bond on a charge of having embezzled $100,000 in university funds.

$1,881,000 in Spurious Bonds.

Attorney General Ellison, together with Frank S. Shattuck, state supervisor of public funds, disclosed that Dr. Smith had available $1,881,000 in university bonds, most of them unauthorized securities, for his market speculation.

Of this amount, they said, Smith attempted to use $964,000 bonds in his trading operations and actually did use $589,000 as collateral with Fenner & Beane, a New Orleans brokerage firm, without the university's authority or knowledge.

It was announced at the United States attorney's office in New Orleans that an investigation will be made of the $12,500,000 state charity hospital there, built during the last two years with the aid of a $3,600,000 PWA grant.

In Shreveport the United States attorney has turned over to the department of justice numerous complaints of immorality in the National Youth administration there, and WPA investigators are sifting charges that property constructed with PWA funds has been converted to private use.

76 GO TO TRIAL IN N. Y. TODAY ON RACKET CHARGES

Unionists Accused of Extorting Millions.

New York, July 9.—(AP)—The government's case against seventy union men and six other individuals—the first persons indicted here on charges of violating the federal anti-racketeering act of 1934—will come before United States Judge William Bondy tomorrow.

The defendants, indicted May 31, 1938, were accused of extorting a million dollars or more annually from the billion dollar a year business in the trucking of general merchandise and perishable foodstuffs. They also were indicted under the Sherman anti-trust law.

Amen Directs Inquiry.

Among those indicted were the president, the secretary and the treasurer of Local 807 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America. Conviction on each of the five counts of the two indictments would mean possible prison sentences of forty-one years and fines totaling $50,000 for each person.

The indictments were returned after a grand jury inquiry directed by John H. Amen, special assistant to the United States attorney general, who has more than 200 racketeering convictions to his credit. Amen will take time out from his investigation of Brooklyn law enforcement to prosecute the case.

May Ask for Delay.

Opposing him—at least as a defense adviser behind the scenes—will be Senator Burton K. Wheeler [D., Mont.], who has been retained as counsel for a group of the defendants. Wheeler last year predicted the government, by pressing the case, would incur the resentment of labor.

James D. C. Murray, a co-counsel for the defense, said today he did not know if Wheeler would be present tomorrow.

RESUME INQUIRY IN KANSAS CITY POLITICS TODAY

Kansas City, Mo., July 9.—(AP)—Jittery days are here again for those who once held high places in the badly shaken Pendergast machine.

The federal grand jury, which contributed heavily to the downfall of Boss Tom Pendergast and his organization will reconvene tomorrow.

Waiting to be tackled by the body is a stack of evidence gathered by more than twenty federal agents since the jury recessed four weeks ago. At that time the jury had returned more than 400 indictments, chief among them the income tax true bills against Pendergast and R. E. O'Malley, his chief political henchman.

Over the week-end agents of the treasury department conferred with their chief, Elmer L. Irey, on what Irey described as "the aftermath of the O'Malley and Pendergast investigations."

In the last month, federal agents have been investigating the 5 million dollar "emergency fund" of former City Manager H. F. McElroy. They also have called for records in the water leak survey scandal by which $395,500 was paid to a dummy engineering concern.

SUICIDE OF GIRL BLAMED ON FEAR SHE'D LOSE JOB

New York police last night were investigating the suicide of Judith Ann Palmer, 22 years old, a former University of Chicago student, who shot and killed herself Saturday in her room in a New York hotel. Friends said she had been despondent since she received notice early in the week that she was to be dismissed from her first stage job. She was one of several girls playing the rôle of Lady Godiva in a show at the New York World's Fair.

Miss Palmer used a pistol, a property in the show, which she had carried away. She left two notes, one concerning finances and another addressed to her mother, who is now in Ganges, Mich. Miss Palmer was the daughter of the late Philip O. Palmer, Chicago advertising executive. She and her mother lived until recently in the Sovereign hotel. Miss Palmer had gone to New York to study dramatics.

Funeral services for Miss Palmer will be held in New York. A friend of the girl's mother said she was ill and would be unable to attend the funeral.

MOTHER, 14, ASKS COURT TO ANNUL HER MARRIAGE

Omaha, Neb., July 9.—[Special.]—Maude Morrow, who at 14 gave birth on March 30 to a boy, asked the District court yesterday to annul her marriage to John Hamer, 19 years old, a farm hand.

Juvenile authorities have placed the baby in an institution.

"The romance—if you call it that—grew out of a meeting on the railroad tracks," explained Mrs. Flora Potter, juvenile worker. "When the baby came neither father nor mother was able to care for it. Maude went only as far as the sixth grade in school. She ought to be playing with dolls."

BANDIT FORGETS WHERE HE SHED HIS COAT AND GUN

The neatly dressed robber who went into the tavern at 5535 Cottage Grove avenue last night wasted no time in displaying a pistol and taking $20 from the wife of the proprietor, Mrs. Bettie Auerbach. Then he fled into Washington park.

A half hour later Policemen William Tapscott and William Harvey halted a stranger leaving the park. He resembled the bandit as described by Mr. Auerbach, except that he wore no coat. Questioned, he admitted that he was the man sought. He is John Ritter, 38 years old, 3234 North Ridgeway avenue.

Tapscott asked him about the coat. "I am so forgetful," said the prisoner, "I left it and my pistol on a bench in the park. Now I can't remember where the bench is."

FATALLY STRICKEN AT PICNIC.

Jacob Wisotsky, 54 years old, 213 East 18th street, was stricken by heart disease yesterday while attending a picnic at 87th street and Western avenue and died soon afterward in a hospital.

Dispossessed

MRS. ELLEN HOLMSEN.

New York, July 9.—[Special.]—Alternatives of packing her belongings and getting out or answering a dispossess notice in Hackensack court tomorrow were faced by Mrs. Ellen Tilton Holmsen, whose eccentric clothing and deportment shocked her neighbors and the owner of her rented bungalow in Maywood, N. J. The deadline for Mrs. Holmsen to vacate was set by Mrs. John F. Collins, the owner, who obtained the dispossess order last Thursday. Mrs. Collins, who is attempting to sell the cottage, objected because her tenant drove prospective buyers away with a broom, it was said. Neighbors objected because Mrs. Holmsen appeared on the staid town's streets in pajamas.

3 VOLCANOES IN ERUPTION; WERE QUIET 100 YEARS

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 9.—The volcanoes San José, Planchon, and Petorca, the first of which is opposite Santiago, after having been dormant for a century, are now in eruption, scientific circles confirmed today.

Reports were heard from an explorer, Juan Giroud, who recently returned from the Andes where he investigated isolated statements of increased volcanic activity.

The Salto observatory announced that the eruption of Mount San José is of great technical importance, because it bears out the theory expressed after the earthquake of Jan. 24 that underground activities are moving gradually northward along the Andes range.

5,000 METHODISTS OPEN DES PLAINES CAMP MEETING

Five thousand Chicago Methodists attended the opening sessions of the Desplaines Camp Meeting's eightieth session yesterday.

Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf addressed a mass meeting of Chicagoland Methodists in the afternoon and Dr. Richard C. Raines of Hennepin Avenue Methodist church in Minneapolis spoke at the evening services.

The summer assembly will continue through July 23. Morning, afternoon and evening services will be held daily. The program also will include spiritual retreats.

HITLER OR DUCE? TYROLEANS MUST TAKE THEIR PICK

150,000 Get 3 Months for Decision.

BOLZANO, Northern Italy, July 9.—(AP)—Some 150,000 Italian-Germans appeared today to have been given 3 months to decide whether they wanted to leave their homes and become Germans or stay here and see their children and grandchildren grow up as Italians.

Crucial decision faced by 150,000 in blackened area.

Legally they already are Italians; they have been since the treaty of St. Germaine gave the Austrian South Tyrol, then a part of the Austro-Hungarian empire, to Italy as world war spoils.

By physique, language, and dress, however, they and their ancestors have been German or Austrian for hundreds of years.

Decision Forced Upon Them.

The decision was forced upon them by an agreement which, officials said, was reached in principle a week ago between Italy and Germany. Such details as property settlements and transportation remain to be worked out.

Nazis here said 8,000 Germans who were not Italian citizens must leave the frontier regions. Most expected to go back to Germany within three months, although Germans said some might migrate to other parts of Italy if they chose.

In addition, Italian citizens of German origin whose political records have not satisfied the Italian government may be moved away from the frontier.

The total number of those who eventually will be compelled to leave the frontier district was not yet revealed.

Population Alarmed.

Peasants and landowners, as well as some businessmen, became alarmed when word first spread that all inhabitants of German blood would have to go.

Newspapers have told them nothing. Official and party sources let it be known that only those who actually were German citizens would be obliged to leave as the Italian-German agreement now stands.

But around 150,000 must make the crucial decision. Their children speak Italian in the schools. Many also speak German which may be studied in the higher grades.

The general belief was that a majority, especially those who own property, would elect to remain.

B. THOMASHEFSKY OF YIDDISH STAGE DIES IN N. Y. AT 75

New York, July 9.—[Speical.]—Boris Thomashefsky, who first introduced the Yiddish theater to America and who for many years was a familiar personage on the east side of New York, died today in Beth Israel hospital. He was taken there Saturday after suffering a heart attack. The actor was 75 years old.

He translated into Yiddish the plays of Shakespeare and, in the National theater which he built on 2d avenue, he presented them season after season to packed audiences.

Thomashefsky wrote nearly eighty operettas of his own, and introduced such famous figures as Bertha Kalich, Belle Baker, Joseph and Rudolph Schildkraut, and Regina Zuckerberg. The latter was hailed as the Jewish Tetrazzini when he brought her to this country thirty years ago.

Boult's Ravinia Finale Reveals His Wide Taste

BY CECIL SMITH.

Sir Adrian Boult took leave of his Ravinia audience yesterday afternoon with a program that showed once again his catholicity of taste. The first half opened with the prelude to Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel," followed by an orchestral arrangement of the Scherzo from Mendelssohn's octet for strings; the first performance anywhere of an arrangement for solo violin and string accompaniment of the Andante from Bach's Italian Concerto, by Mabel Wood Hill, of New York; and Holst's Oriental Suite, "Beni Mora." Schubert's great C-Major symphony occupied the post-intermission period.

In transcribing Bach's harpsichord music Mrs. Hill has treated her material with the utmost simplicity. From beginning to end the movement is a rhapsodic violin solo, played competently yesterday by John Weicher, but without much inner spark, accompanied reticently by the string choir. In this form the music is much more affecting than it might have been if Mrs. Hill had worked harder for novel effects.

The Mendelssohn scherzo, unknown here in its orchestral guise, is a delectable addition to the répertoire. Although less animated and chattery than the beloved "Midsummer Night's Dream" scherzo, the music has the same ethereal lightness of touch and exquisite grace. The orchestra played it with delicacy and charm.

Sir Adrian projected Holst's oriental music forcefully. The last movement, based on an unceasing repetitious figure in the flute, he built into a magnificently sonorous chorus.

In the Schubert "Symphony of Heavenly Length" Sir Adrian gave one of the strongest performances of his entire fortnight at Ravinia. Details of tempo and nuance were held to an extremely large design, so that the long symphony moved from beginning to end with an unusual sense of direction. No incidental effects along the way were allowed to deflect the music from its main purpose. The resulting performance was more forthright than subtle, but it found in the music a single integrity which many conductors never discover.

Next Thursday evening Vladimir Golschmann, conductor of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra, begins a term of eight concerts as guest conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

Miss Fairbank's Singing Stirs Park Audience

BY EDWARD BARRY.

With a rumble of thunder furnishing an obbligato to one of her songs and with mile high cumulus clouds putting on a wonderful show in her honor, Janet Fairbank last night made her first Grant park appearance. At this, the tenth of the free lake front concerts, the Chicago soprano was supported by the Chicago Philharmonic orchestra under Richard Czerwonky's direction.

The venture was successful. In "Dich Teure Halle" from "Tannhäuser" Miss Fairbank revealed a finely focused voice capable of great power without damage to quality. Competently she flung across the footlights her very sound conception of the song, and had the satisfaction of knowing [by the volume and tempo of the applause] that the music had inflamed the imagination of her audience. The encore was Massenet's "Open Thy Blue Eyes," done with a sweet lyricism which expressed itself in serenity of line and in carefully restrained color effects.

Speaking of color, the words "Leise, leise," in the Prayer from "Der Freischutz," were delivered with a quite soul shattering beauty of tone. But later in the song—later in the same phrase, come to think of it!—Miss Fairbank marred her work somewhat by two or three poor attacks. And the last page of the air was much, much too slow, especially in view of the fact that the audience was jittery in anticipation of a deluge.

Mr. Czerwonky and the orchestra put enough life into the "Scheherazade" suite to make its forty minutes seem like thirty-five. Strauss' "Don Juan," too, profited by numberless fine sonorities, spacious phrasing, and vigorously molded rhythms.

Col. Armin F. Hand and his American Legion band will be heard at the Grant park concert at 8 o'clock this evening. The soloists will be Rosalinda Morini, soprano, and Richard Stross, cornetist. The concert will be given at the band shell opposite 11th street. Admission will be free. The program:

Festival March ..... Caferelli
"Deep Purple" ..... De Rose
Overture "Patrie" ..... Bizet
Solo, "Thou Charming Bird" ..... David
Miss Morini.
Selections from "Roberta" ..... Kern
Tone Poem, "Finlandia" ..... Sibelius
Prelude and Siciliani — "Cavalleria Rusticana" ..... Mascagni
Solo, "Ah, fors'è lui" from "La Traviata" ..... Verdi
Miss Morini.
"Danse Baroque" ..... Herbert
"Claire de Lune" ..... Debussy
"When You're Away" ..... Herbert
Solo, "The Lost Chord" ..... Sullivan
Mr. Stross.
The Evolution of Swing, "From Africa to Harlem" ..... Bennett
March, "Wings of America" ..... Frey

5,000 Hear Forest Concerts and Sing National Anthem

In the green woodlands rimming the city, 5,000 Chicagoans yesterday forgot their strangeness to hum "Your Land and My Land." They tapped out the meters of Bach, nodded in time to Elgar, Borowski, and Carpenter. Then they stood together, all religions, all nationalities, heads bared under the waning sun, and sing "The Star Spangled Banner."

"This is a great thing!" exclaimed Dr. Adolph Bohn, pastor of the Edgewater Presbyterian church, as he watched them. "These people singing together under the open sky. It is spiritual. It is cultural. And it is proudly American.

Dr. Bohn heard the choir of his own church, directed by Samuel R. Burkholder, in a Sunday afternoon concert at Caldwell woods. It was one of three held yesterday, the fourth in a series of twenty-one summer vespers to be presented in the forest preserves by the Cook county commissioners and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

At Thatcher woods, Lucy Atkinson led the Chicago concert chorus in songs that filled the hillsides, and at Dan Ryans woods, Theodore F. Gose lured hundreds of listeners to hear the music of the Immanuel Lutheran Junior choir.

Aerielle Frost Frazer Weds in East Saturday

BY JUDITH CASS.

THERE may not be many Chicagoans at the wedding, but every one who knew the Frost sisters when they lived in Chicago is interested in the marriage of Aerielle Frost Frazer and the Hon. Michael Strutt, which is to take place in Newport, R. I., next Saturday. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Washington Frazer of Detroit, Mich., and Newport. Mrs. Frazer was Lucille Frost, and her daughter is the namesake of her aunt, the late Mrs. Robert Grosvenor of New York and Newport. The third sister, Marie, is Mrs. Valentine C. Bartlett of Hobe Sound, Fla., formerly of Lake Forest.

The wedding had been planned to take place under a tent on the front lawn of the Frazer cottage on Bellevue avenue, Newport, but the arrangements now have been changed. The ceremony will be performed in St. Augustin's Roman Catholic church by the pastor, the Rev. Joseph P. Coleman.

Bride-to-Be Decides on Additional Bridesmaids.

Miss Frazer had expected to have only two attendants, Mrs. Robert Ogden Bacon Jr., the former Eleanor Young, as matron of honor and Miss Patricia Gardiner of Vancouver, B. C., a cousin, as a bridesmaid. With the change of locale of the ceremony, however, Miss Frazer has decided to have several additional bridesmaids, including Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Miss Consuelo Villa, Mrs. Francis Taylor, and Miss Virginia French.

Mr. Strutt, the son of Lord Belper and of Lady Rosebery and the brother of the duchess of Norfolk, will have Raymond Guest of Middleburg, Va., as his best man. Since a church ceremony has been arranged, it has been decided to add a group of ushers.

John Jacob Astors to Entertain for Couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Young will have a dinner-dance for the bridal party the night before the wedding and the John Jacob Astors also will entertain for Miss Frazer and Mr. Strutt. The bridegroom's guests will occupy the Winthrop villa, leased for a week, during the prenuptial festivities and the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Strutt will live in London.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett and their sons, Charles and David, will be in Newport for the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, former Chicagoans who now live in Washington, D. C., have cabaña No. 12 at famed Bailey's Beach at Newport this summer. The new cabañas, which replace those demolished by last September's hurricane, were drawn by lot. There are only sixty-two cabañas on the beach, which is the most exclusive one in this country.

Miss Jean Palmer Becomes Bride of Dr. C. P. Small.

Another marriage of interest to Chicagoans took place in Princeton, Ill., on Saturday afternoon when Miss Jean Palmer became the bride of Dr. Charles P. Small. Relatives at the small church wedding and at the reception following in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Charles A. Palmer, included the bride's cousin, Mrs. John A. Stevenson, and the bridegroom's niece, Mrs. Hayden B. Harris; Mr. Harris, and their daughter, Miss Valeria Harris.

The former Miss Palmer is a niece of the late James H. Eckels. Dr. Small has been a widower for several years. He and Mrs. Small returned to Chicago Saturday with their Chicago relatives and are at home in his apartment. They will go away later in the summer.

Mrs. Harris, her daughter, and Mrs. R. Townsend McKeever are leaving today by motor for Virginia and New York. Mr. Harris will go east by train. The Harrises are building a home in Leesburg, Va., to which they will remove permanently this year. Miss Harris, who will be married to

Makes Debut at Onwentsia

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Miss Grace Shumway, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward DeWitt Shumway of Lake Forest, was introduced to society Saturday night at a dinner-dance at the Onwentsia club. Miss Shumway, who is a Vassar college student, was photographed at Arlington Park one afternoon recently. She was wearing a fascinating printed frock with the words "who do you love" forming the pattern.

Bustles, an Easy to Wear Kind, Arrive for Fall

BY RHEA SEEGER.

The commotion over the bustles on early fall frocks is really a commotion over a name. The bulky contraptions illustrated in the bygone glories of Godey's Lady Book are not comparable to the sophisticated, restrained affairs bustling out this fall.

The 1939 versions are soft in outline, and made of intricate bows, loops, double folds, and cascades of folds and bows attached at the center back of the skirt.

What really is revolutionary is the return of the fitted, unwrinkled waistline and the curve of the hips. This is enough to startle any food loving woman, for such a revealing fashion means but one thing—a fitted corset. It is the only possible surety that a new dress will live up to its price tag and glamor. Short flared skirts and demurely basque cut blouse tops are easy to take and easy to wear, but the defined narrower waistline is something else again.

Already there are enough of these bustle effects out to tempt a susceptible shopper. Unquestionably they have a compelling lure. They do have that typically feminine appearance and when you see them in combinations of taffeta and thin wool it will be difficult not to buy one. You will want to try out one of these charmers.

Stunning dull crêpes in inky black skin thin trick materials, such as bagherra and pebble crêpes, are exciting new finds in midsummer daytime dresses that have an artful suggestion of a bustle. The first showings of thin summer blacks can serve as forecasts of the future. You will see the newest sleeves just as suavely draped and shirred as the bodices and carefully cut skirts. The sleeves are the result of deceptively simple designs executed by crack designers. These are fluidly curving creations without one single bit of extra trim.

ENGAGEMENT

The engagement of Miss Nancy Neilson Braun to Roger Watson Barrett is announced by her parents, Circuit Judge and Mrs. August Braun of Milwaukee, Wis. Miss Braun is a graduate of Penn Hall Junior college in Chambersburg, Pa., and of the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts. Mr. Barrett, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver R. Barrett of Kenilworth, was graduated from Princeton university and is now a senior in the Northwestern university law school.

Good Morning!

You'll love this movie, folks!

It tells a new sort of spy story in a new sort of way and introduces a new sort of Scotland Yard sleuth—guy with a devastatingly droll sense of humor; clever, unexpected—never obvious or smart alecky. This, plus presenting you with something mighty glamorous in the way of a hero and heroine.

The title seems ominous and the plot really gives you something to think about—it being concerned with the precautions taken by Great Britain to protect her aircraft inventions—and her trouble in keeping her secrets.

But the characters of this story, while fully realizing the seriousness of the conditions with which they are dealing, also are aware that occasional laughter and relaxation sharpen the perceptions, and that Emerson was undoubtedly right when he remarked that "the great never take anything seriously." So, you find guile tempered with smiles, and "Clouds Over Europe" a laughing matter at the same time it is NO laughing matter. [GRAND direction!]

Re the tale: The interest of a foreign power is, apparently, centered on the Barrett airplane plant. Test planes that fare forth to try out new inventions mysteriously disappear and are heard of no more. . . . Comes Maj. Hammond, attached to the British military intelligence, to see what goes on there. . . . His sister, a newspaper woman, has previously been fired from the plant lunchroom where she had been posing as a waitress and making eyes at handsome Pilot Tony McVane, who is a smart young man, and doesn't in the least believe that the test planes have been victimized by "acts of God" or anything of the sort.

These three are the most interesting characters. All other parts, however, are brilliantly played.

Ralph Richardson, whom you'll remember most happily as the drink loving doctor in "The Citadel," is delightfully at home in the rôle of Maj. Hammond. He's the fun center.

Laurence Olivier is a swift thinking, strategic acting, immensely appealing Tony McVane. Valerie Hobson you'll like as the peppery, pretty newspaper woman.

Dialog is crisp and always pat.

I found "Clouds Over Europe" just plain refreshing! [And the same to you!]

See you tomorrow.

Good-bye To Vienna

By Olga L. Rosmanith

(Copyright: 1939: By News Syndicate Company, Inc.)

SYNOPSIS.

An American girl and her Viennese sweetheart, Franz Gruenwald, in a café in Vienna, hear a radio announcement of Hitler's entry into Austria. The girl, Marian Taylor, has been staying in Franz's home, studying voice. Franz fears for his foster-father, Prof. Josef von Plasy, author of a recent anti-Nazi book. He refuses to flee the country and leave his wife, Gisela, and son Johann, who has the mind of a child. Leopoldine, a pro-Nazi woman surgeon, in love with Franz, warns him to send the American girl home. Her brother, Karl, is a Storm Trooper. Von Plasy is taken off to jail to die from shock. In order to take Gisela's money out of the country to deliver to her friend, Emil Wiedermann, in Riga, Marian invests it in rare stamps. Herr Speyer, the stamp merchant, guesses her purpose, but is sympathetic and asks her to deliver a picture to a friend of his in Riga, a Mme. Lonska. Franz loses his job. When Leopoldine secures one for him he accepts it for the sake of his dependents. In Riga Marian learns Herr Wiedermann is in love with Gisela and wants to arrange for her and Johann to come there. Mme. Lonska insists that Marian stay with her. Marian realizes that Mme. Lonska is a spy and that she thinks Marian also is one and that the picture from Herr Speyer was a message in code. Marian returns to Vienna.

INSTALMENT XXV.

STEPPING INTO DANGER.

Leopoldine opened her cigaret case again and found it empty—laid it open on the table. Franz took the hint and beckoned the waiter. "You know more about health than I do, Pola, but it strikes me you're smoking far too much."

"That's as may be. About the job—that, of course, is only temporary. I'm pulling strings to get you something better——"

Completely deceived by her apologies for her rudeness to Marian and her theatrical outburst on the score of overwork jitters, Franz' suspicions of her motives had been lulled. Now they rose again.

"Thanks, Pola, but you've done enough. This will do splendidly for a stopgap and a jumping off place for efforts of my own. I don't want to impose on you——"

Her eyes glinted. "So you don't trust me after all. In spite of all we've just been saying about it."

"I do. I do. It's not that."

"Then what is it?"

He simply could not have her discussing his American venture with him, arguing against it, probably losing her temper again and saying things against Marian. He said, what was true enough—"I have the usual male pride, I suppose. A desire to forge my own way ahead. To keep my independence."

She was utterly exasperated, and the effort not to show it brought a warm color to her olive cheeks. "I don't see the difference between taking this job at my hands or a better one—except for the prestige and the salary."

"Don't do anything again when your instinct says 'No.'"

"There is a difference, Pola. A difference so subtle, and from your point of view illogical, that I'm not going to give myself brain fever trying to explain it to you." He looked up at the café clock. "Grosser Gott, I ought to be where I belong—mixing cochineal and water in the hospital."

She rose without protest. She was needed there herself. Besides, she had regained the ground she had lost. They parted at the first entrance into the rambling hospital.

Franz' mood was blackly bitter when he got back to the Reichsratstrasse that night and was met in the hallway of the apartment by Marian in a dull blue frock with an expensive looking white orchid on her shoulder.

A day's milk for twenty T. B. children on the sunshine roof was his immediate, irritated reaction.

He kissed her roughly, as if he needed her but were angry with her. She put up her hands to shield the fragile beauty of the flower. "Live and let live," she said lightly.

"You're beautiful to me in a cotton dirndl," he said somberly, "so why the Marie Antoinette extravagance?"

"O, I see. Well, come in here and I'll explain it to you."

They sat in the professor's little study while Johann laid the supper table.

"First," said Marian, "you must put an end to my suspense. Are we, or are we not, out of a job?"

"That's all right for the time being. Leopoldine was having one of her devilish little jokes at my expense—because she was trying to get me something better."

Marion quivered with jealousy. "Indeed. Well, that's not necessary."

"So I told her. So I'm sticking to the pill business."

"Praise be to Allah. Now I will tell you what happened about the passports."

"So the nice, kind American consul gave it to you?"

"Darling—I believe you're jealous. So you want to know about the orchid first? A very old man gave it to me. An old man in a skull cap with a tassel——"

His face tightened up instantly. "Gott im Himmel, you've been to see Herr Otto Speyer."

"Certainly—why not?"

"It wasn't enough for you to have that close shave in Latvia. You had to go right back and walk unprotected into the house of another spy. You gave him Mme. Lonska's message, I suppose?"

"Certainly I did. That's what I went there for."

"Lieber Gott! If he had had an inkling you had stumbled on the truth that the two of them were secret agents what do you suppose he would have done to you?"

"Done to me? That dear, charming old man! What on earth would he do to me?"

"Kill you, of course. What else could he do?"

Marian slid off Franz' knee, stood up and stared at him, utterly incredulous, her lips almost trembling into laughter.

He drew her back. "Listen, Marian, this is a world with many worlds in it. It's an age of deadly conflict. Not of conquest for plunder as in the time of Alexander, nor entirely of ambition as in the day of Napoleon. It isn't even nation against nation now, so much as brother against brother, class against class. Survival of the strongest. Conquest by the cruelest. Ideologies that spread like dry rot and try to swallow up the others. So, of course, there's espionage and counter-espionage on a scale never before known in history.

"Austria is Germany now, and Germany punishes her natives who turn traitor by putting their heads on the block. What spy is going to risk that revolting end by allowing an outsider who suspects his secret to go away free to inform on him? Not even your dear aristocratic old gentleman."

Marian sat down beside him a little weak in the knees. "If you would see him you wouldn't believe it."

"I would believe it." Franz was in deadly earnest. "I have seen and heard things in this city which I don't believe while I'm seeing and hearing them, but the spy's ruthlessness in his own defense is logical and it's very easy to believe it. Furthermore, you would hardly believe your old aristocrat would take communist pay, would you? He has no country left to betray, but he is betraying his class. It's easy enough to see why. Aristocrats have the toughest time when a régime goes smash, because they don't know how to be poor—they can't adjust themselves to a low standard of living. This may seem melodrama to you. But it's stark realism to me. Go into that man's house once more and let him know what you guess about him, and you'll never come out of it alive. And what's more no one will ever find you. They don't murder like amateurs. They know what to do and are always prepared to do it."

"That's enough, Franz. I won't go again."

"Now look here, Marian, you told me you were scared in Lonska's house and actually thought of running away from it. Why were you scared if you think what I say is just plain ridiculous?"

"I don't know. It was instinctive, I suppose. I never thought—or put the thought into words—that there was any chance of anybody murdering me."

"Well, I'll tell you something. Instinct is a mysterious thing. Something to be respected. It's a dark sixth sense that often knows more than we do. Don't do anything again where your instinct rises and says no."

"O, Franz, I won't."

Gisela put her head in. "I hate to interrupt such an earnest session as this seems to be, but I'm in the act of serving up a specially nice dinner."

Shorten Nails if They Break or Are Brittle

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

It's no longer a question of whether you like those long, long talons, colored to the tip end of the nail with a tint your best friend never would call a sweet, sentimental rosy shade. They are worn and, if you don't like 'em, the girl herself usually is nice enough to alibi anything she may do in the way of high-styling.

Nor is it a question any longer which of a couple of nail shades you should wear, but which of dozens of alluring shades. This nail polish choosing, we think, still is a bit in the kindergarten stage, viewing as we do the often discordant note the shades strike in an ensemble of color.

What we are concerned with today is the state of the nails to be glorified with color. The state we refer to particularly is the uniformity of nail length achieved by precaution against a broken one or two in the row. No one has to tell you what the sight of that one unsightly nail does to the beauty of all the others in the row. As some one said: "The beauty of your hand is no greater than its weakest finger nail."

Common sense tells you that, if you have the kind of nail that snaps off on the least provocation, you have to oil it frequently to give it pliability. If you have that kind of nail structure, it would be better not to cultivate the extremely long nail anyway, at least until such time as your care indicates immunity from the constant breaking.

There are good oil products on the market for just this sort of thing, but even the hand product you use in cream form or liquid will have a strengthening effect on the nail. Then, too, there are wax bases now that act as a shield in protecting the nails from harmful effects, although their more popular mission is to create a smooth base for ridged and bumpy nails. They level out the nail surface.

If your polish doesn't last a week without chipping, it may be the fault of the polish. It may contain an inferior plasticizer. Or, you may not allow enough time for the polish to dry properly. If you hasten the drying process, you may dry a thin film on top, leaving the enamel underneath still wet.

July 10, 1939.

A day for social activities and artistic creation.

Those born on the 10th often are sought out for advice by others, but they have to stand on their own feet when they need advice. They are born leaders in the field of endeavor they choose and are enterprising.

John Calvin, religious leader, and Sir William Blackstone, legal authority and judge, were born on July 10.

WHAT IS THE PRIVATE LIFE OF A DOCTOR?

The intimate secrets of the career of a young doctor—and his loyal, lovable nurse. Their fight together for success . . . their struggle to live and love like other people. Don't miss it!

"YOUNG DOCTOR MALONE"

W-G-N MONDAY THROUGH FRIDAY 1:15 P.M.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

In the teens and in the twenties, as a smart young woman pointed out to us the other day, girls just scrub up and make up and forget their faces for the day. But if they carry that casual habit on into their thirties it's taking a lot for granted.

It's at 30, for instance, that you must be particularly careful, when you wash your face or remove your cleansing cream, to make every stroke an upward one. Don't draw downward. There's enough of a downward contour trend without extra help!

And when you're young and very active it's unlikely, if you're healthy, that the glandular mechanism isn't functioning as it should. Usually the youngsters don't have to worry about such conditions as excessive dryness or excessive oiliness. But when you do get older and the gears aren't meshing as they used to you're apt to run into difficulties. You'll find that you have to use more lubricating cream or stiffer astringents, as the case may be.

You'll notice, too, if you're past 30, that there's something different about your eyes. The eyelids look just a wee bit crepey, maybe. The answer to that is oil and more oil every time you oil your skin. Or maybe your eyes are lusterless and tired. The answer to that may be glasses or a general physical checkup.

In any case, you can't follow the beauty care routine at 30 that you followed at 20. You're getting on, old girl—and different problems mean different methods of care!

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune.]

No matter how much or how little else a breakfast may contain, it must include fruit or fruit juice if it's to fill nutritional needs and afford a balanced diet.

Tomato juice, one of the most inexpensive breakfast beverages, is worth many times its price in vitamin C value. If breakfasts must follow a standard pattern, let there be a tall glass of tomato juice every morning.

Orange juice is equally valuable. I should like to recommend tomato juice twice a week and orange juice twice a week, in the ideal weekly breakfast schedule. That would leave three other mornings for stewed fruits, fresh fruits in season, and other fruit juices.

Breakfast cereals should be included at least three times a week. If you like cereals, serve them at every breakfast, cooked ones three or four times, and ready prepared ones on the other days. Cooked whole grain cereals are most valuable from a nutritional standpoint. Don't always serve the same cereals, time after time. Keep on hand at least two kinds of prepared cereal, and two kinds which need cooking.

Eggs should be included often, three or four breakfasts out of the seven if possible, two at least.

Bacon, ham, Canadian bacon, sausages and other breakfast meats aren't necessary at breakfast, but they're mighty good, so I'd suggest they be included twice or thrice during the seven days.

Toast one morning, cornbread or muffins another, waffles or pancakes occasionally, coffee cakes and biscuits now and then, can take all monotony out of the breakfast bread. When cornbread or whole wheat muffins, waffles, or pancakes are served, there needn't be cereal unless you want it.

BALANCED BREAKFAST MENUS FOR A WEEK.

Monday: Tomato juice, cooked whole wheat cereal with sugar and whole milk, cinnamon toast, coffee or cocoa [milk for children].

Tuesday: Cooked fresh plums, cornbread, soft cooked eggs, bacon, coffee or cocoa [milk for children].

Thursday: Orange juice, prepared cereal with top milk, bacon, buttered toast with jam, coffee, cocoa, or milk.

Friday: Cooked oatmeal with brown sugar and stewed apricots, muffins and jam or jelly, coffee or cocoa [milk for children].

Sunday: Fresh berries with cream, quick coffee cake, eggs baked in tomato sauce, coffee, cocoa, or milk.

Simple Frock for Home

WOMAN'S AND MISS' HOUSE FROCK.

Every housewife needs dozens of frocks for the home. Needless to say, such quantity implies that budget-wise homemakers will make their own domestic wardrobe and thereby save money. The pattern today is simple to follow. It can be the basis of any number of frocks, each one different from the others in fabric, color, and trimming.

The brief sleeves are cut in one with the shoulders. The neckline is a simple V. While the skirt has flare, it has no plaits. Only the side seams are to be joined, thus cutting down on sewing labor. Pockets, if you wish them, are used on the skirt. Trim this simple cotton model with ruffling, lace or braid, as you choose. If you wish to go to a little more trouble, give the dress a soft rolled collar, as illustrated in the sketch at the lower left.

Style No. 2601 is designed for sizes 14 and 16, and 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, and 48 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 2⅞ yards of 39 inch material.

James H. Symington in the fall, will live near by in Lynchburg in a charming house that is only two years old.

In St. Paul, Minn., on Saturday, Miss Tayloe Hannaford, daughter of the Foster Hannafords of Winnetka, became the bride of Albert Goodwill Churchill, son of Mrs. Durand Churchill of Oakland, Cal., and Birchwood, White Bear Lake, Minn. The ceremony took place at 3:30 o'clock in the Ames chapel of the Unity church, the Rev. Wallace W. Robbins officiating. Only the families and a few close friends were present. A reception followed at the Hannaford summer home on Manitou Island, White Bear Lake.

The bride wore a gown of white tulle over white satin and a white tulle and rosepoint lace veil that first was worn by her great-grandmother. She carried an informal arm bouquet of stephanotis.

Mrs. Creighton Churchill, the bridegroom's sister-in-law, as matron of honor, and the bride's sisters, Miss Priscilla Kay Hannaford and Charlotte Scott Hannaford, as maid of honor and flower girl, respectively, wore yellow net gowns ornamented with green velvet bows and carried trim bouquets of Peruvian lilies with trailers of small leafed ivy. They wore ivy wreaths in their hair.

Creighton Churchill was his brother's best man. Ushering were the bride's brothers, Foster Hannaford Jr. and Ogden Hannaford. Lawrence Howe, Sidney Hyman, and John Barden were among the Chicago guests. Mr. Churchill and his bride are motoring west and will be at home after Aug. 1 in Berkeley, Cal.

Henry-Montgomery Wedding Attended by Chicagoans.

The John G. McDonalds and the Huntington Henrys were in Louisville, Ky., on Saturday for the marriage of their nephew, Alvan Read Henry, and Miss Virginia Gray Montgomery, which took place in the home of the bridegroom's cousin, Miss Mattie Norton. His parents, Judge and Mrs. Robert L. Henry, came from Bulkeley, Egypt, for the ceremony, and later may go to the Wisconsin summer home of the McDonalds for a short visit. The bridegroom's only brother, Robert L. Henry III. of Lexington, was the best man. Read Henry and his bride will live in Louisville.

Two Chicagoans were in the bridal party at a large Long Island wedding last Saturday, that of Miss Phyliss Whitney and William S. Rowe III. The Chicagoans in the party were Miss Mary Gardner and Arthur G. Cable Jr. The ceremony took place at the Church of the Advent in Westbury, followed by a reception at Homeacres, the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Whitney. The bridegroom is a son of the John Jay Rowes of Cincinnati.

From their home in Scarsdale, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. John H. C. Templeton, formerly of Glencoe, have sent word of the engagement of their daughter, Miriam Hardy Campbell Templeton, to William Henry Myers Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Myers of Bennington, Vt. Mr. Templeton is a member of the large Templeton clan of Chicago.

Miss Templeton was graduated in June from Bennington college. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. John F. Weedon and the late Mr. Weedon of Wilmette. Mr. Myers was graduated from the Bay Path institute at Springfield, Mass., in 1937.

Mrs. Flanders has planned many of the lovely gardens in Lake Forest, and members of her class will visit them during the afternoons.

Starck. The committee, which has been responsible for the arrangements of the largest sale of the year, includes Mrs. Bartholomay Osborne, Mrs. Philip Wrigley, Mrs. William Spencer, Mrs. William O. Avoid Battles with Children at Bedtime

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Do you have a nightly bedtime battle with your young children? Does your little boy resist the suggestion of bed?

Does your little girl call you after she's in bed, ask for a drink of water or her teddy bear, say she needs to go to the bathroom when you know she couldn't possibly, complain of being too hot or too cold, or even of being afraid?

If any or all of these things happen, the chances are there is something wrong with your bedtime technique. The chances are that your small one wants your attention.

Perhaps you make getting bathed and undressed and to bed an uninteresting and entirely businesslike proceeding. Perhaps you aren't really interested in this sweet routine of life with your little boy or girl. Or perhaps you don't manage suppergetting and the end of the day well, and are so rushed and tired that you hustle your child through the proceeding, tuck him in, and leave him without ceremony.

I'm certain that a big percentage of poor going to bed and even actual sleeping habits and general evening friction between mother and child are due to this uninterested and uninteresting handling. Here is a letter that is worth your reading:

"My dear Mrs. Bevans: I would like some suggestions on how to gain obedience from my little son. My 2½ year old is not bad, but I think he may be better if I have a few of your hints.

"I would like to tell you how we get our little fellow to bed without tears or talking. I have resorted to the old time curfew on pretense, and also to the little verse of 'Wee Willie Winkie.' Our son has gotten to the point where he enjoys going to bed and repeats this verse while he tries to undress himself.

"I wrote this because I thought it might stop some mothers from putting their little ones to bed and letting them cry themselves to sleep. Another thing: If mothers would stop threatening children with bed and even putting them there as a punishment when they are naughty the children would not be so apt to hate it."

"How to Establish Good Sleeping Habits" is a leaflet of interest to parents and nurses. Send a large, stamped, addressed envelope for it. Address Mrs. Gladys Bevans, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

Two Child Groups Send Contributions to the Free Ice Fund

Every summer the free ice fund receives gracious evidence of the wholehearted generosity of children. It has become a custom, in many sections of the city, for youthful club members to league together in little theater projects, to promote lemonade sales, to organize circuses, or even sacrifice their allowances to send pennies to the poor. With their contributions they send childish notes, regretting that they have no more to share.

Yesterday's mail brought two such letters. Before school closed room 213 of the De Witt Clinton school voted to send its room dues to the ice fund. It amounted to $2.50, enough to supply ice to two families this week. In another envelope was a check for $5.50, a donation from the Greenwood Avenue Charity club, with a membership of eleven small girls.

Grateful acknowledgment is made of these and the following gifts:

Annie E. Freese	$ 10.00
Mrs. S. O. Knott	10.00
Six legal stenographers	10.00
Greenwood Ave. Charity club	5.50
Constance T. Ritchie	5.00
Jeanette Leyize	5.00
DeWitt Clinton school, Room 213	2.50
M. Birney	2.00
Friend at Magician Lake, Mich.	1.00
Mrs. Margaret Parmly	1.00
Phil Kinsley	1.00
	$ 53.00
Previously acknowledged	$256.30
Total	$309.30

Camp Algonquin, operated by the United Charities for tenement mothers and children and supported in part by TRIBUNE readers, received two gifts yesterday, bringing the total this year to $299.27. They were:

E. A. M.	$ 2.00
Annie E. Freese	5.50
	$ 7.50

If you care to contribute to either of these funds, please send your donation to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. It will be thankfully acknowledged in these columns.

Sally to Take Guests to Film of Sonja Henie

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

[Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Tribune Charities, Inc.]

I know you boys and girls just love to watch Sonja Henie ice skate, that some of you have voted Tyrone Power the most popular man on the screen, that few of you would miss a chance to hear Rudy Vallee and his band, and I've heard you burst out laughing at the very sight of Edna Mae Oliver—and those are just a few of the reasons I decided to take you to see "Second Fiddle."

All of these favorites of yours are in this new film, and it's a musical as well, with six new songs by Irving Berlin. On Thursday, July 20, 100 boys and girls are coming with me to the Chicago theater to see this prize movie package. There'll be a stage show, too, but I'll tell you more about that later.

Remember, today is Monday, and our deadline for letters is next Thursday, as usual, so you haven't much time to waste if you're going to try for an invitation to this party.

If you would like very much to come to this party, write me a letter and tell me about it. I want to know why you'd like to come, who you are, where you live and your age. Those items must be included in your letter if you're to be eligible for an invitation. You can tell me anything else you think might prove to me that you really should be invited.

There will be room for fifty boys and fifty girls in the winning group, and those lucky youngsters will find their names printed in next Sunday's TRIBUNE. If you're a real movie fan, and write a good letter, maybe you'll see your name in the winning list. Sit right down and compose your letter to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Monday, July 10.

A day of mixed blessings, with the results leaning toward the better side if we'll hold the temptation to leap or speak without thinking it over first. Tendency to anger during business hours. Socially more comfortable in evening.

According to CULBERTSON

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

Ask the average "social player" what he thinks of experts and their so-called professional games and he is likely to curl his lip before answering: "Those birds? Why, they all play as though their lives depended on it! Never a laugh or even a smile."

In this, Mr. Average Player would be quite wrong! A great many funny things happen in expert games—more, in fact, than one ever finds among the dubs. From my experience, it is the latter group that plays "for blood." Particularly in match-point duplicate games one usually finds considerable hilarity when experts compete against each other, especially when a situation such as the following arises:

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

This fantastic series of bids actually was produced by four well known experts in a recent New York duplicate. I need hardly say that most of the bids require considerable explaining. East's opening club bid was, of course, correct, but South's vulnerable overcall [as he was later the first to admit] was horrible. West's double struck terror to South's heart and he visualized a nice, fat goose egg on this particular board. When North rescued with one no trump and, in turn, was promptly doubled by East, South felt he might as well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb and, in a frantic effort to wriggle out of the double, bid his three card heart suit. West did not feel quite strong enough to double this and passed for his partner's decision.

North, naturally, was delighted with the new suit, and now East was rather up against it for a good bid. He knew that South was a player who indulged in considerable "psyching" and, with the A-K-6 of spades in his own hand and West's double of one spade showing considerable strength in the suit, East strongly suspected that South had chosen this occasion to make a phony spade bid. Acting on this suspicion, East ventured two spades. South passed promptly, hoping to heighten the opponents' impression that his one spade bid had been a psychic, and now West went astray. Spurred by the same suspicions that East had felt, West raised East's bid. When this three spade contract got around to South, he could not resist the temptation to double. It all seemed too good to be true, but who was he to look a gift horse in the mouth? It seemed very unlikely that the opponents could have a safe run-out to another suit at the four level.

The defense was perfect and resulted in a three trick [800 point] penalty. The singleton diamond was opened. North won and returned a diamond, South ruffing. South then boldly laid down the heart king. The ace won and declarer investigated the trump suit by leading the five to the ace. When North showed out, declarer groaned and stopped leading trumps. The A-K of clubs were cashed and a club was ruffed, but then declarer could not return to his own hand without fatally leading trumps. He played the diamond king. South ruffed and cashed the heart jack, then led the heart nine to North's queen. North returned a diamond. Declarer ruffed with the six, but was overruffed with the seven, and South still had to make a spade trick.

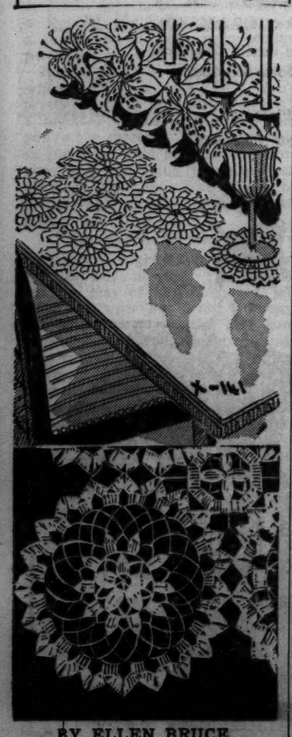
Crocheted Place Doilies Are Made in Dahlia Design



BY ELLEN BRUCE.

Crocheted place doilies which can be made in an evening are destined for permanent favor. Four round dahlia medallions are required for the center mat illustrated, and a single medallion is used for the coffee cup or water goblet. The pattern is a simple one to create, and an experienced and rapid crochet worker probably could make an entire set in two hours.

For instructions in crocheting the luncheon set in dahlia design, No. X-141, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

WIDSETH SEES BOTH SIDES IN ALL-STAR GAME

Once a Collegian, He's a Giant Now.

O'Brien on W-G-N

DAVEY O'BRIEN, Texas Christian university star quarter back, who is a candidate for the All-Star football team which will meet the New York Giants, world professional champions, in the sixth annual All-Star game in Soldiers' field on Aug. 30, will be interviewed at 8:30 tonight over station W-G-N. O'Brien at present is teaching football at the St. John's Military academy boys camp in Delafield, Wis.

BY ED WIDSETH.
[Former Minnesota Football Player and Member 1937 All-Star Team.]

Minneapolis, Minn., July 9.—It's going to be a strange experience for me playing in the College All-Star-New York Giants game in Chicago Aug. 30. I will then have been on both sides of the fence, and I must admit I'm looking forward to the meeting with some perplexity. While playing with the All-Stars I heard so much about the lack of good old college spirit among the professionals. Maybe I even thought it was true. Now I feel differently.

Ed Widseth.

I feel myself decidedly privileged to be in that position of playing on both sides. I know there are a lot of my mates who feel the same way about it, and who will be in precisely the same position of playing the game both ways.

Recalling the fun I had as a member of the collegiate squad, I will have some misgivings, too. For I really did thoroughly enjoy myself. I met a lot of fellows I had played against and many I had heard much about. It was a pretty fair education to team up with them, observe and exchange reactions, and in other ways made for a thoroughly well rounded relationship.

Chance for Collegians.

One thing strikes me upon the dual nature of those games, too. It certainly provides a dandy opportunity for the college boys who intend to step into the professional games. Especially is this true of those lesser known players who really have a tougher job establishing a reputation.

I know how the college boys feel about it now. They have a great chance to play a whale of a game and improve their chances of catching on better in the professional league. There's no kidding about it, the inspiration urge is pretty much on the collegians' side, and I'm going to realize that when I step onto Soldiers' field with my Giant mates.

It's an entirely different situation when you're a collegian. You're pretty much the pitcher. When you're a member of the professional team you're the catcher. Those boys want to pin your ears back in the worst way, and I'm going to make every effort to see that there is one big Norwegian who doesn't have his ears pinned back that night.

Remembers All-Star Pals.

I'll never forget Sammy Baugh and his marvelous passing. I'll never forget the play of Bud Svendsen, who came up with me from Minnesota and played such a whale of a game at center. I'll never forget the great pass catching of Gaynell Tinsley and the work of the combination of Arnie Herber and Don Hutson.

But most important is the pleasant association with members of the All-Star squad before the game. I am convinced that such an association

Popular Song 504.

She never seemed to me
The girl she ought to be;
And yet I know
I haven't any right
To doubt her eye's pure light,
Nor her heart's snow;
I never saw her do
A thing to call untrue,
An action base;
And still I somehow feel
She never did reveal
Truth in her face.
CHORUS:
Her brow had the light of an innocent child,
But one couldn't help feel she was earthy;
Her lips blushed like roses whenever she smiled,
Yet she seemed of her charms so unworthy;
She never frequented the dance halls and bars
Though she seemed to be one of that leaven;
It's strange that a girl who had eyes just like stars
Should remind one so little of heaven. —T. E. B.

To Prince.

I press my path through the city street
As I grip the steering wheel,
And watch four ways, in the trafic maze,
With a ruthless, reckless zeal.
I battle my way through the blatant day
While I look for the light that's red
And a boy on a bike or the little girl
That darts from the curb ahead.
The driver who cuts in front of me,
A truck that suddenly swerves,
And the pungent fumes of half-burned gas
All batter my jaded nerves.

What wouldn't I give for good old Prince,
Of thirty years ago,
And a smooth dirt road five miles from home,
With a full moon hanging low?
The reins around the socket draped,
He'd peacefully plod for town,
Then nuzzle my hand for a sugar lump
Before I bedded him down.

REDS HAMMER 3 CUB HURLERS FOR SEVENTEEN HITS

Rout Lillard in First and Dean in Fourth.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., July 9.—Deep chagrin which Chicago partisans may feel over the 13 to 1 slaughter of the Cubs today should be tempered by the knowledge that the ghastly spectacle made 21,321 Cincinnati witnesses very, very happy. Despite the wholesale character of the Reds' production, it required only 1 hour and 37 minutes to get the thing over.

The aforesaid Cincy witnesses didn't seem to mind being deprived of the suspense that is a thrilling part of many baseball matches. All chances for suspense thrills vanished in the first inning, when the Reds hammered out six runs off Gene Lillard and Dizzy Dean as insurance for All-Star Bucky Walters' thirteenth victory of the year.

Lillard Leaves Hurriedly.

Lillard was the starting pitcher, having won his way back to starting eminence by some good work recently, after weeks of unneeded rest. A pass to Bill Werber, doubles by Lonnie Frey and Ival Goodman, a single by Ernie Lombardi and a double by Harry Craft rounded out Lillard's term with one out in the first inning. Dean went in and retired Wally Berger, but pitched a homer to Bill Myers. Walters was out to retire the side.

Dean kept out of trouble, pitching only a double to Werber, until the fourth, when singles by Walters and Werber, a sacrifice fly by Frey, a single by Goodman, Harry McCormick's fourteenth home run of the season, and a double by Lombardi netted the Reds four runs and brought the replacement of Dean by Vance Page. Page held the Reds to two hits and no runs until the eighth inning, when singles by Myers and Frey, a double by Goodman, and a single by McCormick lifted the Cincy total to 13 runs.

The Reds made 17 hits, everybody in the cast getting at least one. McCormick, long leader of the National league in the matter of batting in runs, drove in five today to lift his total to 66 for 70 games.

Cubs Get Five Hits.

The Cubs, in taking their worst trimming of the season, pounded out five hits off Walters. Bill Herman wasted a double in the first inning and Carl Reynolds wasted one in the second inning. The champions made their other three hits and their lone run in the fourth. In this session Augie Galan, Jim Gleeson, and Dick

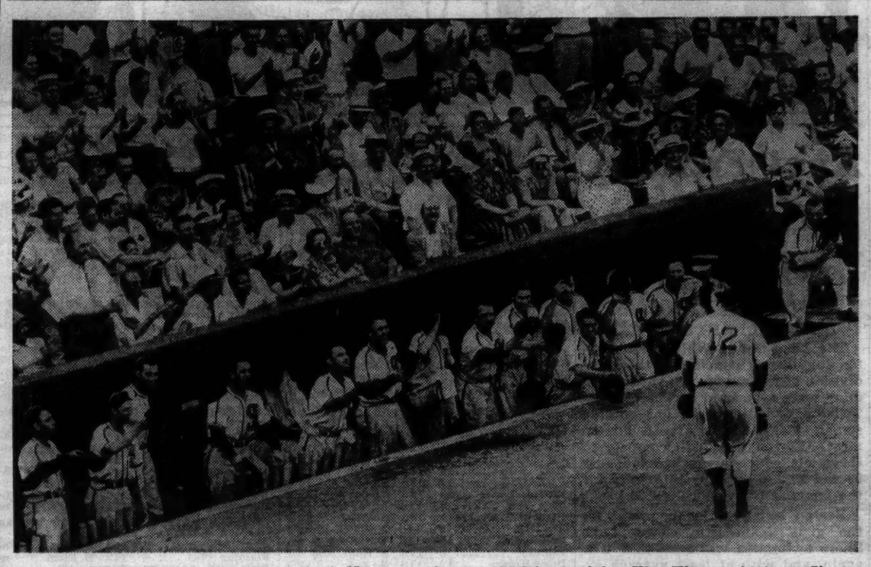
"Adieu, Kind Friend, Adieu"



The White Sox rise to plague Buck Newsom with an old Tiger trick. The Tigers did it to Jimmy Dykes (extreme right) in Detroit a week ago, so when the great Newsom fumed out of Comiskey park yesterday during the Sox's ninth inning rally the Chicagoans lined up and doffed their caps in mock courtesy to the departing Tiger pitcher. RED SOX TAKE 2 MORE FROM YANKS, 4-3, 5-3

New York, July 9.—(AP)—Completing a five game rout of the Yankees for what is believed to be a record since the stadium was built a decade and a half ago, the Boston Red Sox defeated the world champions twice today, 4 to 3 and 5 to 3.

In the first game Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox hit a home run with one on in the eighth inning to win the game and Jimmy Foxx did the same in the eighth inning of the second game.

This feat cut the Yankees' lead to 6½ games, gave the Red Sox eight victories in a row and twelve in their last fourteen games and their second consecutive series against New York.

Joe DiMaggio got six hits in eight times at bat in the two games and drove in all the Yankees' runs in the second game. The champions outhit Boston in both games.

Bob Grove and Vernon Gomez started the first game and each lasted six innings. Grove was removed for a pinch hitter and Gomez got a blister on his pitching hand.

P. G. A. Strikers Win Fight as Shute Plays; 3 Lead with 68s

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Flushing, N. Y., July 9.—Ralph Guldahl, Sam Parks, and Fay Coleman took the lead in the first eighteen holes of the qualifying round of the twenty-second national professional golf tournament today at the Pomonok Country club. They all shot 68s, four under par, for a one stroke edge over Ben Hogan and Tony Joy.

Cards of 68 and 69 are generally interesting news, but the real news today, in this No. 1 family show of the pros, was a 73 turned in by a lean fellow named Denny Shute. The fact that he turned in any kind of a card was the result of a sitdown strike on the part of fifty of the leading professionals of the game.

Barred on Dues Rule.

Shute officially had been barred by the P. G. A. executive committee for failure to pay his dues. A number of the stars in the game, including Horton Smith, Henry Picard, and Paul Runyan, the defending champion, thought that the man who won the championships of 1936 and 1937, not to mention the British open of 1933 and a Ryder cup rôle, should not be barred on a technicality.

For one hour and a half at noon today, the players gathered in a room on the second floor of Pomonok's club house. At the opposite end of the corridor, the executive committee held forth. Finally, George R. Jacobus, president of the association, brought Shute into the executive committee room, and Denny presently emerged smiling, with the information that he would play. Previously, in the players' own meeting, Shute had asked his supporters to forget him and go out and play golf. A number of them, whose starting times were included in the period during which the strike took place, refused.

Decision Saves Suit.

By its decision the executive committee saved the P. G. A. from a costly lawsuit for the Pomonok club, which already had turned over $15,000 of its guarantee, was ready to sue for that amount if the stars did not play. The club was ready to go through with its suit, and would have if the delay had lasted ten more minutes, officials said.

Whether Shute will play the entire tournament, granting that he qualifies and enters Tuesday's match play rounds, remains to be seen. No official statement was issued by the executive committee tonight, but there was a suspicion that Shute will not play the whole show out. Because of the executive silence, all of the strikers remained in the dark, but indicated that they may make the strike a fact before the week is over.

Low 64 to Qualify.

The low sixty-four scorers in the 36 holes of medal play ending tomorrow night will qualify for the match play bracket, which opens Tuesday with two eighteen hole rounds. From there until Saturday's final the survivors will play thirty-six holes daily.

ROUT NEWSOM IN NINTH; THEN HAMMER ROWE

5 Run Blast Decides Second Game.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox, who possess an amazing knack for doing the unexpected, took a look at 30,000 assembled admirers yesterday and went to work. Seemingly doomed to defeat in the first game of a double-header, they yelled "Boo" at Detroit's Tigers in the ninth inning and produced two runs for a 4 to 3 triumph. Then they caged the Tigers again with a five run seventh inning assault in the second engagement to win, 6 to 3, and sweep the series, thus improving their grip on third place.

While fashioning the twin victory, the Sox banished one fellow who admits he's great and dusted off another who was trying to prove he's the pitcher he was a few years back. The first was Buck Newsom, who was a winner until the ninth inning of the first game when his own mates as well as the Sox chased him from the picture. The other was Schoolboy Rowe, who despite his dead arm held on in a 1 to 1 duel in the second game until the inevitable happened in the seventh.

Brown Finishes Both.

By the time the Sox reached their half of the ninth in the first game, Ted Lyons had departed and Newsom, having given up only three hits in eight innings, was certain his 3 to 2 lead was adequate. But he passed G. Walker, probably fearing the latter's home run power. Luke Appling forced Walker, and the Tiger defense collapsed. Eric McNair whacked a single to left, Earl Averill fumbled, Appling scored the tying run, and McNair went to second. Newsom was yanked and his rescuer, Al Benton, walked Mike Tresh. Then Johnny Marcum, who was destined to break another tie in a more heroic fashion, batted for Clint Brown and slapped a grounder to Bill Rogell. Rogell fumbled and McNair scored the winning run.

Johnny Rigney opposed Rowe in the second game, the former getting an edge on Joe Kuhel's tenth home run, and Rowe climbing back into a tie with the aid of an error by Appling. But in the decisive seventh, Appling, McNair, and Pinch Batter Hank Steinbacher forced Rowe into a full house which a moment later was relieved by Marcum, batting for Ollie Bejma. Marcum singled two runs across and eventually Mike Kreevich did the same to end Rowe's régime. And when the inning was completed, Ol' Doc Brown was called to make his thirty-first appearance of the year and his fourth in three days.

FIRST GAME

The run the Tigers scored off Lyons in the second inning of the first game was mainly a gift from Appling, who neglected to pick up Higgins' ordinary grounder for the first out. Lyons almost beat the error by fanning Greenberg and getting Cullenbine on a foul to Tresh, but Tebbetts singled to center and Higgins went home.

The Sox couldn't pick up a hit off Newsom in the first three innings, but in the fourth they produced a pair which proved sufficient for a temporary tie. Kuhel engineered this mild assault by leading off with a double to right center. He scored an instant later on Kreevich's single. Mike went to second on Cullenbine's return throw and continued to third when the toss went wild. But he was caught between third and home on Radcliff's tap to Rogell after which Walker and Appling flied to Cullenbine.

Tigers Go Ahead Again.

Two Tiger hits dissolved the tie in the sixth. McCosky opened with a single to right and was bunted to second by Rogell. Three strikes retired Averill, but Higgins singled to center field and McCosky counted. The enemy margin widened in the seventh as the result of two more hits. Cullenbine doubled past Kuhel and scored on Tebbetts' single in the same direction.

The eighth in which the Sox had

ARLINGTON STAKE ELIGIBLES TO RUN IN 3 RACES TODAY

Classic Nominees Entered in Sprint Event.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Eligibles for three of Arlington Park's major stakes will go to the post today as the third week of the meeting begins.

The Englewood purse, a 6 furlong event for 3 year olds, will bring out three horses which are nominated for the classic; one Arlington handicap candidate—Co-Sport—is scheduled to run in the Morton Grove purse, a 7 furlong dash for older horses, and six juvenile fillies will get chances to convince their owners that they are worth the risk of a starting fee in next Saturday's $35,000 gross Lassie stakes.

Easy Mon to Run.

Warren Wright's Easy Mon, the Walmac farm's Olney and John Marsch's Lightspur are the classic nominees which will perform. Easy Mon has never been worse than third in his last eight starts and has been running in his best form during the last month. After winning two allowance events at Lincoln Fields, he finished second to Drudgery in the Arlington Inaugural handicap and lost to Technician by a neck in a 6 furlong event a week ago. Saturday.

Olney has been unable to win since the Belmont meeting last September but has been showing considerable improvement in recent weeks. In finishing third to Technician and Easy Mon in the above mentioned race July 1, this colt was only half a length behind the winner.

Lightspur also was close up at the end of that race, being beaten by two lengths in taking fourth place. He was outrun in the Arlington Inaugural but had good races to his credit at Lincoln Fields and Churchill Downs.

Valdina Horses Entered.

The Lassie eligibles which will run today include E. F. Woodward's Valdina Madcap and Valdina Spy, Milky Way farm's Storcky, Millsdale stable's Millgal, J. O. Keene's Jeanne d'Arc, and R. O. Higdon's Pinnacle Light. It is a foregone conclusion that a number of these will be in the barn when the Lassie is run but some of them may earn starting assignments by good performances in today's second race, a 5½ furlong event.

Jeanne d'Arc will be making her first start. Though her racing ability is unknown her breeding is good and she has worked well. She is by Man O' War out of a Luke McLuke mare, Jeanne Bowdre. In her best recent trial she went a half mile in 47 1-5 seconds. Her stablemate, War Beauty, which showed fine speed in winning last week, is also eligible for the Lassie and there is a possibility that Keene may decide to send both fillies to the post.

Ladies Guests Today.

Among Co-Sport's rivals in today's Morton Grove purse will be the Milky Way farm's Tiger, Calumet farm's Cross Bow II., and Shady Brook farm's Visigoth.

Arlington Park officials have decided to make ladies' day a permanent Monday feature. Ladies will be admitted with no charge today except federal and state tax.

Another Swim Title Sought by Lake Shore

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The Lake Shore Athletic club, defending team champion in the boys' division of the annual 100 yard swimming races sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., has entered strong teams in the tenth annual meet. Eleven boys will compete in the trials which are scheduled July 22 and 23 and all hope to qualify for the finals at Navy pier July 30.

Beaten last year in the quest for the girls' team title, seven Lake Shore swimmers will seek that title again, and with at least average expectation of scoring as many points as their Chicago rival, the Medinah club, winner of this team championship in 1938.

Young Girl Is Star.

Outstanding among the women entries is 13 year old Francoise Rose, who will compete in the class B preliminaries at Sherman park. Frankie is the Central A. A. U. junior women's 500 yard free style champion and record holder. Last year she won first place in The Tribune swim meet in the class A division. Weighing only 70 pounds, she is considered the most promising free style swimmer in the middle west, and will be an Olympic prospect next year.

Lake Shore will be represented in each class except class A. Billie Nicholson, an experienced swimmer despite her youth, will swim in class C. She is 15 years old and will swim at Sherman park. Lois Zahn, 18 years old, is expected to win a place in the finals of class C.

Entered in class E in Jeannette Colley, a newcomer to competitive swimming, who recently took second place in the women's senior Central A. A. U. 100 yard free style championship at Lake Shore behind Claudia Eckert's record breaking first. Also entered in this class are Kay Walsh, Elsie Eckert and Adeline Price.

Madison Finished Second.

Madison Athletic club finished second to Lake Shore in the men's team title race last year. Bloomington, Joliet, and Calumet City, Ill., tied for third. Eleven clubs and cities were represented in the championships. Nine teams scored in the girls' team trophy race, victory going to the Medinah club.

Last year's champions were:

BOYS—Class A, Richard Upsall, Madison A. C.; class B, Ian Crabb, Joliet, Ill., Y. M. C. A.; class C, Robert Amundsen, Lake Shore; class D, Peter Stasiak, Calumet City, Ill.; class E, James Wollrab, Bloomington, Ill.

GIRLS—Class A, Frankie Rose, Bloomington, Ill.; class B, Jane Cloyd, Indianapolis, Ind.; class C, Mary Jane Wichser, Medinah club; class D, Betty Wyle, Medinah club; class E, Muriel Berndt, Medinah club.

These champions are eligible if they compete in the next highest age division. Class E champions thus are eliminated. Entries will be accepted for the preliminaries until midnight July 17.

IRISH BOXERS DUE TO DOCK IN NEW YORK TODAY

C. Y. O. Representatives to Welcome Squad.

New York, July 9.—[Special.]—Ireland's amateur boxing champions who will meet the outstanding Chicago C. Y. O. boxers in Soldiers' field on Wednesday night, July 19, are to arrive here tomorrow.

The Irish fighters left their homeland for America last Sunday. They are aboard the Cunard liner Samaria. Word has been sent by Trainer Dick Hearns that all are keeping in good condition by working out daily on the ship.

Upon their arrival in New York, the Irish squad will be welcomed by Tom O'Connell, boxing director of the Chicago C. Y. O., Mike Murphy of the public relations department of the C. Y. O., and a number of Irish leaders of New York. The Irish boxers will stay in New York until Tuesday night when they will leave for Chicago, where they will arrive Wednesday at the Union station at 1:15 p. m.

Will See World's Fair.

While in New York the invading squad will be taken to see the World's Fair, where they will visit the Irish building as special guests of Alexander J. Connolly, Irish commissioner at the fair. They will also go on a sightseeing tour of the city.

Arrangements are being made to hold a luncheon for the Irish fighters on Tuesday. Those expected to attend are Gene Tunney, former heavyweight king; Barney Ross, a product of Chicago's Golden Gloves, who held the world's welterweight and lightweight crowns; James J. Braddock, who won the heavyweight title from Max Baer and two years later lost it to Joe Louis, and Benny Leonard, one of the greatest fighters ever to hold the lightweight championship.

Second Visit for Irish.

This is the second consecutive year Ireland's boxers have been invited by Bishop B. J. Sheil, founder and director of the Chicago C. Y. O., to meet a C. Y. O. team. Proceeds of the show will be used to aid thousands of needy girls and boys in the Chicago area. The Irish lads made an impressive showing in last year's bouts against the C. Y. O. and because of this were invited for a return engagement.

None of the ten boys who fought in Chicago last year is a member of this year's squad. Several who appeared in Chicago last year attempted to earn another trip to America, but did not make the grade. This year's Irish team is composed of ten boxers, two in the 126 pound class; two in the 147 pound division, and one in each of the other six weight classes. The team is reported to be much stronger than that of last year.

MOON MULLINS—A POOR INCOME

MY WORD! I CAN'T IMAGINE WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO MOONSHINE.
AND I CAN'T IMAGINE HOW YOU HAPPENED TO LET HIM TAKE YOUR JEWELS TO THAT PAWN SHOP.
BECAUSE HE'S HAD MORE EXPERIENCE WITH PAWN BROKERS THAN ME, AND BESIDES, I LIKE TO SLEEP IN A BED— THERE AIN'T ANY MATTRESSES ON A PARK BENCH, IS THERE?
YOU WILL PROBABLY FIND OUT. I PROMISED THE MANAGER THAT OUR HOTEL BILL WOULD POSITIVELY BE PAID TODAY.
YOU MEAN YOU THINK MOON WON'T GET HERE WITH THE MONEY?
OH, NO-NO, INDEED, MY DEAR--HOWEVER, I WOULD NEVER SEND A HEAD OF LETTUCE HOME BY A RABBIT.

Nestell Aims Right Tonight at Kenneally

Bob Nestell, hard hitting heavyweight from Los Angeles, will open a comeback campaign in a ten round bout against Tom Kenneally of the Catholic Youth organization in Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace street, tonight.

Nestell's big chance to win depends on his ability to land his right on a vulnerable spot. This is Bob's best weapon and if he connects Kenneally may go down and out.

However, Kenneally may be too clever for his California opponent.

In the five round semi-final Tony Motisi, welterweight stablemate of Kenneally, will meet Tommy Howell of Danville. Matches of four rounds will bring together Danny Buckley, Peoria, Ill., middleweight, and Wilbur Dunn, Milwaukee; Billy Seward, Ingamore, Mont., featherweight, and Joey Ojida; Johnny Williams, Danville, welterweight, and Joey Spiegal, Milwaukee.

Pete Lello, Gary lightweight, has returned from Sioux City, Ia., for a ten round headliner with Irish Eddie McGeever of Scranton, Pa., in White City Wednesday. Lello defeated Ray Baker in Sioux City last Friday. Supporting matches to the Lello-McGeever encounter are:

Frankie Genovese, Winnipeg, Man., vs. Jack Carter [8], welterweights.
Verle Davis, Kankakee, vs. Eddie Carson, New Orleans [6], junior welterweights.
Johnny Janis vs. Selman Martin [4], heavyweights.
Pete Ferrand vs. Walter Balaski [4], lightweights.

Widseth Says Game Proved Lots of Fun

has done more to promote good fellowship among the college players than any other factor in football. I really was stunned, too, by the marvelous staging, the showmanship of that All Star-Green Bay game. In fact, it took me a few minutes to get my bearings and get down to business, it was so much of a thrill. For that reason I'm going back into that game not a bit bored or aloof to it all. It really is too good an event over which to become sophisticated.

I hope the Giants put up a whale of a game, and for the sake of the college boys themselves, I hope they put up the same, too.

I think THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and associated newspapers are doing a service to football in putting on this annual game. And when you think of the good that is done for the underprivileged through this game, why, there's no reason why we won't be in there pitching with everything we have.

More power to the All-Star game and may it always continue on the high plane it has attained in other years.

(This is the second of a series of articles by outstanding players in previous Chicago All-Star football games.)

Sands Point Upsets Texas Team to Win Polo Tourney

Westbury, N. Y., July 9.—(AP)—The Sands Point team, paced by Tommy Hitchcock, upset Charles Wrightsman's Texas quartet, 11 to 5, today to win the Meadow Brook club's 20 goal polo tournament. Each team had won five straight games in preliminary play, but Texas, because of its scoring power, was a strong favorite.

SOX BEAT TIGERS TWICE, 4-3, 6-3, TO SWEEP SERIES

Newsom tottering a bit opened with a single to center by Tresh. Steinbacher batted for Lyons and walked with what would have been the tying run if it had reached home. The two advanced on Bejma's bunt. Kuhel grounded to Croucher, Tresh scoring and Steinbacher heading for third, where he arrived safely because Higgins dropped the throw from Croucher. A tie hung on a line drive unleashed by Kreevich, but Croucher speared it. Then Radcliff worked Newsom down to 3 and 2 only to strike out. But the Sox finally caught up with Buck in the ninth.

SECOND GAME

The Sox didn't lose any time getting a lead for themselves in the second game. Kuhel took care of this by hitting his home run into the right field seats in the first inning. The homer was followed by a single by Kreevich, but Radcliff and Walker accomplished nothing.

Although he encountered mishaps such as hits, passes, and even one error, Rigney held off the Tigers through the first four innings. They got to him, however, in the fifth after an error by Appling had given them an opening. Two were out when Luke threw Rogell's grounder into the dugout, a miscue which entitled the runner to second base. Averill then doubled to right center and Rogell checked in with the tying run.

Rowe Is Routed.

The big business in the seventh was touched off by Appling's double down the left field line. McNair singled to right, but Appling was held up at third. Tresh was thrown out by Higgins, and when Steinbacher appeared as pinch hitter for Rigney he was presented with an intentional pass. Marcum waddled in to bat for Bejma and plunked a single into center, scoring Appling and McNair. Kuhel walked, whereupon Kreevich punched a single through short, scoring Steinbacher and Marcum. Rowe walked off the mound, the Sox arising and doffing their caps as he approached their dugout. Previously they had done the same for Newsom. Trout, who took over the job, passed Radcliff, loading the bases. After Walker had fouled out Appling also walked, forcing in Kuhel with the fifth and last run of the inning.

Two runs marked Brown's thirty-first rescue appearance in the eighth. Cullenbine singled off Kuhel's chest, Tebbetts tripled to right, and Croucher singled to center. But Brown fanned York, who batted for Trout, and McCoskey flied to Walker.

The White Sox will appear at South Bend, Ind., this afternoon in an exhibition with the Studebaker Athletics. The guest of honor will be Aloysius Bejma, a South Bend boy who is handling the second base chores for the Sox. Bill Dietrich, who hasn't pitched since he injured a knee on June 17, will start for the Sox.

Red Kress, who was spiked on the right hand by Joe Kuhel in Saturday's game, wasn't able to play yesterday. Bill Rogell, once the Tigers' shortstop, played second base in Kress' place.

Starting next Sunday the Sox will engage in four double-headers in eight days. There's a twin bill at Comiskey park with Washington on Sunday, with Boston on July 18 and 19, and with the Yankees July 23.

TWO JUNIOR GOLF MEETS TO OPEN ON NORTH SIDE

Two junior tournaments, from whose ranks have stepped a number of the nation's star golfers, will open on north side courses today. The women's western junior, open to girls under 18 years, will be held at Exmoor and the Chicago District Golf association's junior closed tournament for boys 21 years and under will hold forth at Northmoor.

A field of more than thirty girls from six states will tee off in the eighteen hole qualifying round of the western junior. No club affiliation is necessary to compete in this tournament and entries will be accepted at the tee.

Among the pre-tournament favorites are Jeanne Cline of Bloomington, Ill., who made a strong showing in the women's western open; Frances Ann McCanna of Rockford, Betty Lou Hammerlund of Normal, Ill.; Georgia Tainter of Fargo, N. D., and a South Bend contingent which includes Lisa Skillern, Margery Luens, Jean Klinger, Nancy Willits, and Ann Condit.

A field double that of last year will compete for the Alden B. Swift memorial trophy in the C. D. G. A. junior closed tournament open to sons of association members.

Giants Come from Behind Again to Beat Dodgers, 3-2

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 9.—(AP)—The New York Giants overtook the Brooklyn Dodgers today for a 3 to 2 victory which gave them an even break in the four game series. A comparatively small crowd of 13,827 attended. Harry Gumbert was credited with his eleventh victory. It was Jim Ripple, pinch hitting for Gumbert in the eighth, who got the third of three singles to score the deciding run. Today's crowd put Brooklyn's attendance for the season above the half million mark.

ORE SHIPMENTS ON LAKES MORE THAN DOUBLED

May Be 35 Million Tons This Season.

Cleveland, O., July 9.—[Special.]—A minimum of 30,000,000 tons of ore will be brought down the lakes this season, according to estimates made by vessel men today, and shipments may climb to 35,000,000 tons. Ore trafic so far this season has been more than twice as heavy as in the corresponding period last year.

If steel plants continue their present rate of ore consumption throughout the season, shipping officials believe the movement will total between 34,000,000 and 35,000,000 tons.

Season estimates were made by vessel operators following a compilation of ore shipments from the opening of the season to the first of this month. A report issued by the Lake Superior Iron Ore association disclosed that boats brought 5,572,998 tons down the lakes last month, against 2,837,745 tons in the same period last year.

Shipments Exceed Year Ago.

The month's shipments brought the movement for the season to 9,231,249 tons, or almost 50 per cent of last year's total movement. Shipments from the opening of the season to July 1, last year, aggregated only 4,278,962 tons, making this season's increase to date 115 per cent, or 4,952,287 tons.

The ore movement is expected to average 5,000,000 tons for each of the next three months unless some of the large fleets send vessels to the docks. Orders for ore have diminished in the last few weeks, but officials of the major fleets report that they have enough business on hand to keep vessels now in commission on the active list for at least two months.

Ore shipments from lake docks to furnace yards increased last week and vessel men are hopeful that the movement will not go into another slump. Railroads carried 2,352 cars of ore to furnaces in one 48 hour period, against only 716 cars in the same period last season.

Soft Coal Movement Larger.

The outlook in the bituminous coal trade continues favorable and vessel men believe that July shipments will be far heavier than those in the same month last year. Shipments from mines are averaging 4,000 cars a day and, as orders are plentiful, vessel men believe that the bituminous coal movement for this month will climb above the 5,000,000 ton mark.

The Canadian and American grain trades remain lethargic, but shipments are heavier than receipts at Fort William and Port Arthur, and a decrease has been recorded in stocks. Wheat stocks at the Canadian ports slumped from 33,552,297 bushels to 29,806,628 bushels in a week. With cargoes scarce, Canadian operators have sent many of their vessels to the docks in the last two weeks.

New grain is making its appearance at Chicago and it is reported that a number of charters for shipments to the east have been made in the last few days. American stocks of all grains at Duluth remain around 19,000,000 bushels with little prospect of heavier shipments until the new grain crop starts moving.

Asks Federal Funds to Spur Use of Cotton

Washington, D. C., July 9.—(AP)—Chairman Marvin Jones [D., Tex.] of the house agriculture committee proposed today that some of the new surplus crop removal fund be used to convert surplus cotton into low priced goods for sale through regular retail channels.

Rep. Marvin Jones.

Congress provided about $14,000,000 to be used this fiscal year in domestic distribution of surplus cotton.

Jones suggested that the cotton be manufactured in established factories and sold through regular retail channels "at a price which will bring full usage."

Says Textiles Are Needed.

He did not discuss the mechanics of how this procedure could be carried out, but declared that "the funds that have now been made available should make the handling of our cotton surplus the turning point in our economic readjustment."

"There is a great need among the masses of people for cotton products," Jones asserted.

An official estimate has placed the amount of land in cotton cultivation on July 1 at 24,943,000 acres, compared with 25,018,000 a year earlier. This year's acreage was slightly below the national planting goal of the agricultural adjustment administration and about 32 per cent less than the average cultivated during the 1928-'37 period.

$66,000,000 Is Spent.

The Federal Surplus Commodities corporation, meanwhile, reported that in the fiscal year just ended it bought 28,000 bales of cotton and 3,798,000 yards of cotton ticking for use by welfare agencies in making bedding for relief families.

The corporation also announced that in the same period it had distributed 1,700,000,000 pounds of surplus farm commodities among 3,300,000 relief families. The cost was $66,000,000.

ITALY PREPARING TO SPUR OUTPUT OF ALBANIAN OIL

Washington, D. C., July 9.—[Special.]—Italy is producing more than 200,000 tons of petroleum annually from oil wells in Albania and is moving swiftly to increase production, the department of commerce reported today.

The exploitation rights are controled by the Acienda Italiana Petroli Aubania, which in 1925 received a fifty year concession from the Albanian government.

The crude oil obtained from these wells gives a natural yield of approximately 13 per cent of gasoline and the usual secondary products. It is asserted in Italy, however, that by the use of new methods the gasoline yield can be raised to almost 80 per cent.

DOUBLE BOTTOM.

Investors' Guide: What is the meaning of the saying, double bottom, when one is talking about stock prices? I hear it used every once in a while but can't figure out what this expression means exactly.—I. L.

Answer: When the price of a stock or the average price of a group of stocks makes a rally after a decline and then goes down again but holds at the previous low point, a double bottom is said to have been made. Suppose, for example, the stock of Amalgamated Thumb Tack goes up to 50 on a certain day after having declined the preceding day to a low of 45 for the year. Then it drops back again a couple of days later but holds at 45. This downward movement, in which it twice touched 45, was its double bottom. The expression is supposed to indicate a sign of strength in the demand for the stock or group of stocks spoken of.

SWIFT DIVIDENDS.

Investors' Guide: Please list for me the amount and specific date of dividends paid on each share of Swift & Co. $25 par common stock so far this year, last year, and in 1937. I know this company's fiscal year ends on the last of October, but what I want is each amount paid in the calendar years I have mentioned.—W. B. B.

Answer: Swift & Co. has paid the following on its $25 par common stock in the calendar years you list:

1937—April 1, 30c; July 1, 30c; Oct. 1, 30c. Total, 90c.
1938—Jan. 3, 30c; April 1, 30c; July 1, 30c; Oct. 1, 30c? Total, $1.20.
1939 [to date]—Jan. 3, 30c; April 1, 30c; July 1, 30c. Total [to date], 90c.

Payments are made usually to stock of record the first or second day of the preceding month.

NYLON PATENTS.

Investors' Guide: I am interested in du Pont's new product, nylon, and am wondering if the company has been granted patents for it. How much money are they spending on a plant for this product?—F. W.

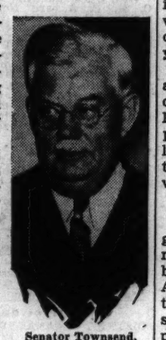
Answer: Four patents for hosiery and other knitted fabrics made from nylon have been granted to E. I. du Font de Nemours & Co. It will spend about $8,500,000 to build a nylon textile plant at Seaford, Del., and about $2,500,000 on extending an existing plant at Belle, W. Va., for making nylon intermediates.

Steel Trade Recovering from Holiday Letdown

Steel markets are recovering rapidly from the interruption of recent holiday and vacation shutdowns, the magazine Steel, trade publication, said yesterday. Ingot production last week dropped 12 points to 42 per cent of capacity, but most of the loss will be retrieved this week, the magazine said. Steel's composite scrap price was unchanged at $14.54 a ton.

Foreign Silver Buying Lashed by Townsend

Washington, D. C., July 9.—(AP)—Senator Townsend [R., Del.] asserted today that the purchase of foreign silver by the American treasury was "tantamount to yielding to blackmail and therefore utterly inexcusable."



Senator Townsend.

In a statement, Townsend said that foreign silver "is utterly useless to the United States, and indeed dangerous, as has been testified by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve system."

The Delaware Republican is author of a bill that would terminate all buying of foreign silver. The senate banking committee is to hold hearings on it this week, with Secretary Hull, who opposes the measure, as the first witness.

Hull contends that foreign purchases of silver aid the "good neighbor" program. Both Mexico and Peru and large producers of the metal.

Townsend said those urging purchases of foreign silver as an aid to Latin American countries should "come to congress and ask" for direct loans.

The Delaware senator said that more than one billion dollars had been spent on the silver purchase program and that four-fifths of the silver "has come from abroad."

"The assertion that the silver purchase act was passed as part of the good neighbor policy simply is not true," he said, adding that the act resulted from agitation for "currency inflation."

FORESEE QUOTA IN MARKETING OF CORN CROP

Traders Base Views on Large Yield.

Some members of the grain trade expressed the opinion last week that the quota system for marketing corn may be invoked next fall if the new crop meets present expectations.

Under the federal farm act, growers in the corn belt would be called upon to vote on the adoption of quotas if the prospective corn crop, on the basis of the Aug. 15 outlook, plus the carryover, equaled 110 per cent of a normal supply.

Chicago statisticians estimate that on July 1 the outlook was for a corn crop of 2,559,000,000 bushels, or 17,000,000 bushels more than the 1938 harvest.

Expect Large Carryover.

Although the crop experts say it is too early to estimate the carryover of corn into the 1939-'40 season, they express belief that it may range between 500,000,000 and 600,000,000 bushels.

Such a large quantity of old grain added to the new harvest would suggest a total supply of about 3,100,000,000 bushels. This would be 400,000,000 bushels, or nearly 15 per cent, in excess of the 1928-'32 average, which excludes the abnormally small crops harvested in recent drouth years.

About 257,000,000 bushels of 1937 and 1938 corn now is held in farm cribs as security for government loans at 57 cents a bushel. The department of agriculture announced last week that farmers may repledge the grain for a twelve month period when the loans mature on Aug. 1.

Will Allow Storage Charge.

To assure that a large part of the grain will be resealed, the government will allow farmers 6 cents a bushel for storing the grain from Aug. 1, 1939, to July 31, 1940, but they must agree to keep the grain stored until Oct. 1, 1940, if the department so desires.

Hitler's Grabs Prove Blow to Trade of 2 Italian Ports

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 9.—An important result of the Austrian anschluss [union] and Adolf Hitler's occupation of Czecho-Slovakia, from Italy's point of view, has turned out to be a sharp decline in the trafic of Trieste and Fiume, two of Italy's most important Adriatic ports.

This statement is made on the authority of economic experts who have been checking up on the volume of trafic in the two ports since Germany's annexations.

German Ports Benefit.

They declare that the chief beneficiaries of this decline, which has been most marked at Trieste, have been the German ports of Hamburg and Bremen.

In 1937 ship loadings at the port of Fiume amounted to 401,000 tons. This figure sank to 332,000 tons in 1938. Ship loadings at Trieste fell from 1,041,000 tons in 1937 to 887,000 tons in 1938. Statistics on the exact effect of the occupation of Czecho-Slovakia on the trafic of these ports are lacking but informed sources declare that it has been disastrous.

Trieste Dealt Heavy Blow.

Czecho-Slovak trade prior to the disappearance of independent Czecho-Slovakia represented as much as 45 per cent of the total trafic at Trieste.

This has been wiped out completely, for the time being at least, and the two Adriatic ports are thus deprived of the small economic hinterland which still remained after the Nazi anschluss.

2,800 BROKER FIRM EMPLOYES MUST TAKE WRITTEN EXAMINATION

About 2,800 employés of member firms of the New York Stock exchange, including security salesmen and traders, will take a written examination today to qualify under the recently amended exchange rules affecting registered employés.

The amended rules provide for more intensive control of member firm registered employés and called for their classification into two general groups, "register representatives" and "branch office managers."

These replace the previous ten classifications, which were branch office manager, customers' man, junior customers' man, foreign representative, international arbitrageur, manager of foreign activities, securities salesman, securities trader, service man, and traveling representative.

Examinations have been given to prospective customers' men for more than three years. Other classes of registered employés also have been examined.

DAY by DAY on the FARM by BOB BECKER

Story of the Lazy Cowbird

July 9, 1939.

ALTHOUGH there are many cowbirds on the farm, few of them venture into the brushy thicket where the bird banding traps are located. The lazy cowbirds [the birds build no nests for rearing their young] seem to be passing most of their time in fields near the stock instead of feeding in the woods and brushy areas. We noticed seven or eight of them in a pasture where the sheep were located.

The other species of birds which nest on the farm probably would be very happy to have the cowbirds stay in the fields with the sheep or other stock all the time, because in such fields there are few, if any, nests in which the female cowbird could lay her eggs. Of all the birds on the farm there is no species which shifts the responsibility of raising a family as does the cowbird.

Plays a Mean Trick.

When the female cowbird is ready to lay its eggs it looks for the nest of some unsuspecting bird of another species instead of building a nest of its own. When it locates such a nest it plays one of the meanest tricks known in the world of birds. Visiting this nest when the owners are not around the cowbird takes it over long enough to deposit an egg.

Then back the bird goes to continue its carefree life in the fields. It doesn't care what happens to that egg. The nesting birds which have been presented with the cowbird egg often hatch it out and care for the chick, thus doing the work of raising young cowbirds . . . a job that no mature cowbird ever does. It's one of the most startling examples of a lack of parental instinct that exists among birds, and all the more amazing when one remembers how courageous most birds are in defending their nests and young.

Homing Instinct Notable.

That nature has given the slothful cowbird such an extraordinary homing instinct is another surprise. It flies more quickly and surely to the place where it was released than any other American species. Banded birds which have been taken hundreds of miles from traps in which they were kept for some time return swiftly and unerringly, while other birds, such as bluejays, redwings, grackles, and similar species, fail to show up.

A little 6 year old girl who lives on the Du Page county farm soon will be a recognized ornithologist if she continues her interest in birds. This spring she located the nest of a killdeer, watched the mother bird incubate the eggs, and noted how soon after hatching the youngsters left the shallow nest on the ground. When we chatted with her the other day she was demonstrating how well she can imitate the call of the bobwhite quail. She often lures bobwhites to the back door of her home by whistling to them early in the morning.

New York, July 9.—Stocks crawled fractions to 2 points higher last week but the volume was the smallest in seventeen years.

Prices rose slightly in three of the full sessions and dipped moderately in the other, while the ticker tape sputtered and stalled and at frequent intervals stopped.

Mainly responsible for the improvement in prices, observers said, was the quieting down of the "war talk." Business statistics likewise continued to show steady if slow improvement, but traders still felt there were too many uncertainties in the air for buying shares.

Stocks sold irregularly higher Monday, but total sales amounted to only 235,140 shares. When the market reopened Wednesday after the holiday, prices closed higher on a turnover of only 351,000 shares. The market closed firm and mixed on Thursday, when 413,800 shares changed hands. Friday the list dropped to an irregularly lower closing, volume being 327,970 shares, and Saturday trading was extremely dull and narrow.

For the five trading days total sales were 1,442,030 shares, or just about what used to be considered a fair day's work.
